

PART XL.

JANUARY.

ONE SHILLING.

ORLEY FARM.

BY

ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

With Illustrations

BY

J. E. MILLAIS.

LONDON:

CHAPMAN & HALL 193 PICCADILLY.

UNIVERSITY OF VICTORIA
THE RIGHT OF TRANSLATION IS RESERVED.
LIBRARY

Victoria B.C.

CHRISTENING-ROBES FOR PRESENTS,
2½ GUINEAS.

BABIES'
CLOAKS,
1 GUINEA.

BABIES'
HOODS,
1 GUINEA.

BABIES' BERCEAU-NETTES, 2½ GUINEAS.

Babies' Baskets, 1 Guinea.

Christening Caps, 1 Guinea.

Shirts, 2s. Caps, 2s. 6d. Gowns, 6s.

All the beautiful Materials used in the business

Sold by the Yard.

MARRIAGE OUTFITS COMPLETE.

White Dressing Gowns, 1 Guinea;

Cotton Hosiery, 2s. 6d.;

Patent Corsets, 16s. 6d.;

Real Balbriggan Hosiery.

Outfit for India Voyage.

Longcloth Chemises, 2s. 9d.;

Nightgowns, 3s. 9d.;

Slips, 3s. 9d.;

THIS PART OF THE BUSINESS UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF MRS. TAYLOR.

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS.

Chamois Leather, with Black Feet.

Waterproof Riding Talma, 1½ Guinea.

Young Gentlemen's Superfine Cloth Jackets, 35s.;

School ditto, 25s.

Young Gentlemen's Shirts, 5s. 6d.

Naval Cadets' Outfits, complete.

RIDING HABITS 5½ TO 8½ GUINEAS.

Linsey Riding Habits
for little Girls,
2½ Guineas.

Everything of the Superior Excellence for which the House has been celebrated for Thirty Years.

53, BAKER STREET,

W. G. TAYLOR.

CASH'S

PATENT

CAMBRIC FRILLINGS,

MORE DURABLE IN WEAR THAN ANY OTHER MATERIAL,

With Woven Hem and Gathering Thread, ready for sewing on the

Washing Apparel

Children,

of

and

Ladies,

Infants.

This Width _____ No. 1.

For Trimming the first Wardrobe of a Baby, or serving as a Foundation for Lace Trimming.

This Width _____ No. 2.

For Frills of Boys' & Ladies' Collars, Wristlets, & all varieties of Tuckers.

This Width _____ No. 3.

For Frocks, Pinafores, Drawers, Children's Night Gowns, & all kinds of Frills.

This Width _____ No. 4.

For Toilet Covers, Night Caps, &c.

This Width _____ No. 7.

For Ladies' Night Gowns, Dressing Gowns, Pillow Cases, &c.

This Width _____ No. 10.

For Boys' Collars, and for the New Paris Fashion of Frilled Petticoats.

THE CAMBRIC RIBBON,

Of the same quality as the Frilling, is manufactured in various Widths, and is adapted for the Sashes and Strings used in all kinds of Ladies' and Children's Washing Apparel.

Sold by all respectable Drapers, in Wrappers, each containing 12 yards. The price varies according to width, the most useful being about 1½d. per yard.

The genuine article bears the names of J. & J. CASH, Patentees, on every Wrapper.

MR. THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS.

UNIFORM EDITION.

Handsomely printed in Crown Octavo, price Six Shillings per Volume.

- THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: A HISTORY. 2 Volumes. 12s.
OLIVER CROMWELL'S LETTERS AND SPEECHES; with Elucidations and Connecting Narrative. 3 Volumes. 18s.
LIFE OF JOHN STERLING.—LIFE OF SCHILLER. 1 Volume. 6s.
CRITICAL AND MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS. 4 Volumes. 24s.
SARTOR RESARTUS.—HERO WORSHIP. 1 Volume. 6s.
LATTER-DAY PAMPHLETS. 1 Volume. 6s.
CHARTISM.—PAST AND PRESENT. 1 Volume. 6s.
TRANSLATIONS OF GERMAN ROMANCE. 1 Volume. 6s.
WILHELM MEISTER. By GÖTHE. A Translation. 2 Volumes. 12s.
CARLYLE—HISTORY OF FRIEDRICH THE SECOND, CALLED FREDERICK THE GREAT. By THOMAS CARLYLE. With Portraits and Maps. Third Edition, Vols. I. and II, demy 8vo., cloth, 40s. Vols. III. and IV. in the Press.

MR. CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

THE ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY EDITION.

Beautifully printed in post 8vo, and carefully revised by the Author. With the Original Illustrations. Now issuing in Monthly Volumes, price 7s. 6d. each.

Already Published.

- | | |
|---------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Pickwick Papers. 2 vols. 15s. | Martin Chuzzlewit. 2 vols. 15s. |
| Nicholas Nickleby. 2 vols. 15s. | Old Curiosity Shop. 2 vols. 15s. |

To be followed by

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| Barnaby Rudge. 2 vols. | Pictures from Italy, and American Notes. |
| Sketches by Boz. 1 vol. | 1 vol. |
| Oliver Twist. 1 vol. | Bleak House. 2 vols. |
| Dombey and Son. 2 vols. | Little Dorrit. 2 vols. |
| David Copperfield. 2 vols. | Christmas Books. 1 vol. |

CHAPMAN AND HALL'S

STANDARD EDITIONS of POPULAR AUTHORS.

- MISS ANNA DRURY'S MISREPRESENTATION. Third Edition. 5s.
TILBURY NOGO. By the Author of 'Digby Grand.' 3rd Edition. 5s.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S CASTLE RICHMOND. A Novel. New Edition. 5s.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S DOCTOR THORNE. A Novel. 6th Edition. 5s.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S THE BERTRAMS. A Novel. 5th Edition. 5s.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S THE KELLYS AND THE O'KELLYS. 4th Edition. 5s.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S MACDERMOTS OF BALLYCLORAN. 3rd Edition. 5s.
W. M. THACKERAY'S IRISH SKETCH-BOOK. With Illustrations by the Author. 3rd Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.
ALBERT SMITH'S WILD OATS AND DEAD LEAVES. 2nd Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.
MRS. GASKELL'S NORTH AND SOUTH. 4th Edition. 5s.
G. A. SALA'S GASLIGHT AND DAYLIGHT; with some London Scenes they Shine upon. 2nd Edition. 5s.
W. H. WILLS'S OLD LEAVES GATHERED FROM 'HOUSEHOLD WORDS.' 5s.
ROBERT-HOUDIN'S MEMOIRS: Ambassador, Author, and Conjuror. Written by Himself. 3rd Edition. 5s.
MISS MULOCK'S HEAD OF THE FAMILY. 6th Edition. 5s.

CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193 PICCADILLY.

Chapman and Hall's New Publications.

NEW SERIAL BY CHARLES LEVER.

TO BE COMPLETED IN TWELVE MONTHLY PARTS,

EACH PART TO CONTAIN TWO ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ."

On FEBRUARY 1st will be published PART I. of

A NEW WORK,

BY CHARLES LEVER,

AUTHOR OF 'HARRY LORREQUER,' 'CHARLES O'MALLEY,' &c.

With Illustrations by 'Phiz.'

MR. ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S NEW WORK.

In demy 8vo, price 11s. Vol. I. of

ORLEY FARM. By ANTHONY TROLLOPE. With 20 Illustrations

by J. E. MILLAIS.

A NEW VOLUME OF

POEMS BY ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

In January.

A NEW WORK BY T. COLLEY GRATTAN.

In 2 vols. post 8vo.

BEATEN PATHS, AND THOSE WHO TROD THEM. By the Author of 'Highways and Byways,' 'Traits of Travel,' 'Civilized America,' &c. [Early in January.]

1 vol. post 8vo, 10s. 6d.

WITCH STORIES. Collected by E. LYNN LINTON, Author of 'Azeth the Egyptian,' &c.

In post 8vo.

A HISTORY OF THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA. By J. G. KOHL.

[In January.]

In 1 vol. post 8vo, 9s.

MADAME RECAMIER: With a Sketch of the History of Society in France.

In 1 vol. post 8vo, 8s. 6d.

NOTES ON FIELDS AND CATTLE, From the Diary of an Amateur Farmer. By the Rev. W. HOLT BEEVER, M.A. Oxon. With Illustrations.

1 vol. foolscap 8vo, with Illustrations.

THE COMMON SIGHTS IN THE HEAVENS, AND HOW TO SEE
AND KNOW THEM. By CAPTAIN A. W. DRAYSON, R.A.

[Nearly ready.]

1 vol. demy 8vo.

A MEMOIR OF THE LATE DUKE OF RICHMOND. [Early in January.]

In 1 vol. fcap. quarto, price 21s. bound in an appropriate ornamental cover,

A HISTORY OF DOMESTIC MANNERS AND SENTIMENTS IN ENGLAND, during the Middle Ages. By THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., F.S.A., Hon. M.R.S.L.,
&c.; Corresponding Member of the Imperial Institute of France (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres). Illustrated by upwards of 300 Engravings on Wood; with Illustrations from the Illuminations in Contemporary Manuscripts, and other sources, drawn and engraved by F. W.
FAIRHOLT, Esq., F.S.A.

In 1 vol. post 8vo., 3s. 6d.

DINNERS AND DINNER PARTIES.

CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193 PICCADILLY.

On December 31st will be published, price 6s., the NATIONAL REVIEW.

NO. XXVII.

CONTENTS:

- | | |
|---|---|
| I. MEDIEVAL ENGLISH LITERATURE—
CHAUCER. | VI. MR. CHARLES READE'S NOVELS:
THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH. |
| II. LUCIUS CORNELIUS SULLA. | VII. ECCLESIASTES. |
| III. THE ITALIAN CLERGY AND THE
POPE. | VIII. MR. MARTIN'S CATULLUS. |
| IV. THE QUESTION OF LAW BETWEEN
THE BISHOP OF SARUM AND MR.
WILLIAMS. | IX. LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU. |
| V. BENGAL PLANTERS AND RYOTS. | X. THE PROVINCE AND METHODS OF HISTORICAL STUDY. |
| | XI. PEACE OR WAR WITH AMERICA? |
| | XII. BOOKS OF THE QUARTER SUITABLE
FOR READING SOCIETIES. |

THE NATIONAL REVIEW, in defining its distinctive position, may dispense with the language of promise, and appeal to the results of the last six years.

It leaves to the Magazines the office, which they so well discharge, of furnishing intellectual amusement, and holding the mirror up to life, with only incidental and variable moral purpose.

It leaves to the other Quarterlies the office of representing some constituted party in Church or State; whose political or ecclesiastical creed forms their fixed centre of gravity, and determines the direction and latitude of their critique on literature, art, manners, and philosophy.

Warring with no interest, and identified with none, it is free to approach every problem from the scientific side, to treat it with conscientious thoroughness, and seek for it a judicial solution. To learn the policy of a party or the doctrines of a sect, the reader must look elsewhere; but if he cares for the principles which underlie the conflicts of the hour, if he is eager rather for the opening truth of the future than the watchwords of the past, he will meet, in the NATIONAL REVIEW, the sympathy of men who have nothing to prop up and nothing to destroy, but are resolved to carry every discussion to the ultimate test of reality and right.

The break-up of old feuds and factions has made room for a journal conducted in this spirit. In every stratum of educated English society liberal men abound who can welcome trustworthy reports of the newer aspects of religious and philosophic thought, and are glad to seek light on their political duties in the atmosphere rather of the closet than of the clubs. On the quiet strength of this growing class the REVIEW has relied through occasional storms of partisan displeasure. At the same time, it has never, by any cosmopolitan professions (which are but another form of party narrowness) contradicted its name of 'National.' In times of foreign conflict, the Reviewers have not construed the relations of international justice to the invariable disparagement of their own country. In the discussion of internal reform, they have protested against the imitation of alien democracies, and traced a method truly historical for the adequate expansion of political franchise. In demanding free development for the religious thought and life of England, they have never treated the existing creeds and churches as effete, or despaired of their enlargement to the spiritual exigencies of the nation. The notices, though numerous, of foreign literature and history, only serve to make clearer the general tone of hearty reverence for the distinctive bases of English character, life, and institutions.

Of the literary workmanship of the REVIEW, the Conductors are perhaps less at liberty to speak than of its spirit and principles. They may, however, be permitted, in evidence of its quality, to refer to the volumes already republished from its pages.

In one respect the NATIONAL REVIEW entered, with the year 1861, upon a new stage. The publishers, with the experience of several years to guide them, are taking a considerable stake in the publication. Their direct interest in it, however, will in no way affect the literary management, except by disembarassing it of business cares, and obtaining for it, as they hope, the encouragement of an ample and growing success.

CHAPMAN & HALL, 193 PICCADILLY.

Chapman and Hall's New Publications.

2 vols. post 8vo, 18s.

THE ENGLISH AT HOME. Essays from the 'Revue des Deux Mondes.' By ALPHONSE ESQUIROS. Translated and Edited by LASCELLES WRAXALL.

'We have given but a slight idea of the fund of entertainment contained in these spirited volumes, and must conclude by recommending them to the perusal of all who wish to hear what a discriminating and patriotic Frenchman has to say to his own countrymen of their ancient enemy and their present ally.'—Economist.

NEW SPORTING NOVEL. Third Edition, post 8vo, 9s.

MARKET HARBOROUGH; or, How Mr. Sawyer went to the Shires.

'From the very beginning of the hero's adventures a certain interest is experienced which never falls off, and the only annoyance felt is that the visit of Mr. Sawyer to the Shires terminates so soon. Indeed, the fault here perceptible may with equal truth be urged against Major White Melville in some of his previous writings, his finishing being too abrupt.'—Press.

1 vol. post 8vo, with a Portrait, 12s.

PAUL THE POPE AND PAUL THE FRIAR: A Story of an Interdict. By THOMAS ADOLPHUS TROLLOPE.

Crown 8vo, 12s.

LUCILE: a Poem. By OWEN MEREDITH.

Fcap. 8vo, 4s.

OURSELVES, OUR FOOD, AND OUR PHYSIC. By BENJAMIN RIDGE, M.D.

Post 8vo, 4s. 6d.

PRACTICAL MILITARY SURVEYING AND SKETCHING. By Captain DRAYSON, R.A. With numerous Diagrams.

One vol. post 8vo, 9s.

THE ISLAND OF THE SAINTS: a Pilgrimage through Ireland. By JULIUS RODENBERG. Translated by LASCELLES WRAXALL.

CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193 PICCADILLY.

In One thick volume, the Twelfth Edition, price 16s.

MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE. Forming a comprehensive Medical Guide for the Clergy, Families, and Emigrants. By T. E. GRAHAM, M.D., Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh.

'Of all the Medical Guides that have come to our hands, this is by far the best. For fulness and completeness they all yield the palm to Dr. Graham's.'—Banner.

'Far exceeding every publication of its class.'—British Standard, February, 1859.

Also, by the same Author, price 10s. in cloth,

ON INFANCY AND CHILDHOOD; embracing the whole subject of Medical and Physical Management from Birth, with Hints to Young Mothers for the Management of themselves as well as their offspring, &c.

'Written in a clear and interesting manner, and the author displays, as in his previous works, much judgment.'—Medical Circular.

'Broad principles and rules, the adoption of which by parents will materially conduce to the health and happiness of their children in after years.'—Wilnes.

London: Published by SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers' Hall Court.

Sold by all Booksellers.

BROWN & POLSON'S PATENT CORN FLOUR.

In Packets, 2d., 4d., and 8d.; and Tins, 1s.

The most interesting account of its value, as an article of daily use, is given in "The Leisure Hour," of May 30, 1861, in a Paper upon "Maize or Indian Corn," from which the following is an extract:—

"Ever since the Potato Famine of 1846-7, very large quantities of Maize have been imported, and the amount is still increasing; this is partly referable to an ingenious and very successful method of manufacture, conducted at PAISLEY by Messrs. BROWN & POLSON, an engraving of the operation in whose factory is appended. There can be no doubt that the amylaceous material prepared and sold by them has all the advantages which they claim for it, under the name of PATENT CORN FLOUR."

Families cannot use too much caution in the purchase of this celebrated article, other kinds being often substituted, encouraged by the issue of fraudulent announcements. Many Grocers, Chemists, &c., who supply the best-quality in preference to best-profit articles, sell none but BROWN & POLSON'S, of which "The Lancet" states, July 24, 1858, "This is superior to anything of the kind known"—an opinion indisputably confirmed by scientific tests and public appreciation.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

RIMMEL'S PERFUME VAPORIZER.

An Elegant, Cheap, and Portable Apparatus, for diffusing the fragrance of flowers in apartments, ball-rooms, &c., and for purifying the air in houses and sick chambers. Recommended by Dr. LETHEBY, Dr. HASSALL, &c., as greatly superior to the means in use hitherto.

Price, from 6s. upwards.

Sold by all Perfumery Dealers, and by the Inventor and Patentee,

E. RIMMEL, Perfumer to the Queen,

96 STRAND, & 24 CORNHILL, LONDON; and 17 BOULEVARD DES ITALIENS, PARIS.

DEBILITY: ITS CAUSE AND CURE.

A GUIDE to the Cure of Nervousness, Low Spirits, Loss of Nervous Power, and Indigestion. Illustrated by Cases, with the means of cure used in each case. Free by post on receipt of Two Stamps. Sent direct from the author, H. SMITH, M.D. 8 Burton Crescent, Tavistock Square, London, W.C.

NO MORE GRAY HAIR.

UNWIN & ALBERT'S COLUMBIAN HAIR-DYE, after Twenty Years' constant use over the whole world, is now universally acknowledged to be the only hair-dye simple in application, and satisfactory in the result.

In cases at 5s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 21s.
 BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

HAIR-DYEING ROOMS.—UNWIN AND ALBERT'S, 24 Piccadilly, are as private and replete with every convenience and comfort as a lady's own dressing-room, and where the hair can be coloured the lightest shade of flaxen or the darkest shade of brown or black, by experienced assistants at moderate charges.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND, this UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British colony, and throughout India and China they have been highly esteemed wherever introduced. For COUGHS, ASTHMA, and all affections of the Throat and Chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

Prepared and sold in Boxes, 1s. 11½d., and Tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 9d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79 St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

[BY ROYAL

COMMAND.

METALLIC
TO THEPENMAKER
QUEEN.JOSEPH GILLOTT

Respectfully invites the attention of the Public to the following Numbers of his

PATENT METALLIC PENS,

which, for Quality of Material, Easy Action, and Great Durability, will insure universal preference.

For General Use.—Nos. 2, 164, 166, 168, 604. In FINE POINTS.For Bold Free Writing.—Nos. 3, 164, 166, 168, 604. In MEDIUM POINTS.For Gentlemen's Use.—FOR LARGE, FREE, BOLD WRITING.—The Black Swan Quill, Large Barre Pen, No. 808. The Patent Magnum Bonum, No. 263. In MEDIUM and BROAD POINTS.For General Writing.—No. 263. In EXTRA-FINE and FINE POINTS. No. 262. In FINE POINTS. Small Barrel. No. 810. New Bank Pen. No. 840. The Autograph Pen.For Commercial Purposes.—The celebrated Three-hole Correspondence Pen, No. 382. The celebrated Four-hole Correspondence Pen, No. 202. The Public Pen, No. 292. The Public Pen, with Bead, No. 404. Small Barrel Pens, fine and Free, Nos. 392, 405, 603.To be had of every respectable Stationer in the World.

WHOLESALE AND FOR EXPORTATION, AT THE

Manufactory: Victoria Works, Graham Street; and at 99 New Street, Birmingham; 91 John Street, New York; and of WILLIAM DAVIS, at the London Depôt, 37 Gracechurch Street, E.C.

Allen's Patent Portmanteaus and Travelling Bags with square openings.LADIES' WARDROBE TRUNKS, DRESSING BAGS WITH SILVER FITTINGS,
DESPATCH BOXES,
Writing and Dressing Cases,
AND 500 OTHER ARTICLES FOR HOME OR CONTINENTAL TRAVELLING.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

Also ALLEN'S BARRACK FURNITURE CATALOGUE of Portable Bedsteads, Drawers, Easy-Chairs, Washhand Stands, Canteens, &c., post free.

J. W. ALLEN, MANUFACTURER AND PATENTEE,
22 and 31 West Strand, London, W.C.GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,

USED IN THE ROYAL LAUNDRY,

and pronounced by Her Majesty's Laundress to be the finest Starch she ever used.

Sold by all Chandlers, Grocers, &c., &c.—WOTHERSPOON & CO., GLASGOW AND LONDON.

STERLING SILVER.—WILLIAM S. BURTON

has added to his Extensive Stock of General FURNISHING IRONMONGERY and HOUSE-FURNISHING REQUISITES a selection of STERLING SILVER SERVICES for the table or for presentation. His prices will be found considerably below those usually charged:—

Fiddle Pattern.	oz.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons . . . 30 at	7	4	..	11	0	0
19 Table Forks . . . 30 "	7	4	..	11	0	0
12 Dessert Spoons . . 20 "	7	4	..	7	6	8
12 Dessert Forks . . . 20 "	7	4	..	7	6	8
2 Gravy Spoons . . . 10 "	7	4	..	3	13	4
1 Soup Ladle . . . 9 "	7	4	..	3	6	0
4 Sauce Ladles . . . 10 "	7	10	..	3	18	4
1 Fish Slice	2	10	0
4 Salt Spoons, gilt bowls			..	1	0	0
1 Mustard Spoon, ditto			..	0	7	0
12 Tea Spoons . . . 10 at	7	10	..	3	18	4
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	0	13	6
1 Moist Sugar Spoon	0	8	6
1 Sugar Sifter	0	15	0
1 Butter Knife	0	13	6

£57 16 10

Cottage Pattern Tea & Coffee Service.

	oz.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Teapot	22	at	10 0	..	11	0 0
Sugar Basin . . . 14 "	"	11	0	..	7	14 0
Milk Ewer . . . 7 "	"	11	0	..	3	17 0
Coffee-pot . . . 25 "	"	10	0	..	12	10 0

£35 1 0

King's Pattern.	oz.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons . . . 40 at	7	6	..	15	0	0
12 Table Forks . . . 40 "	7	6	..	15	0	0
12 Dessert Spoons . . 24 "	7	6	..	9	0	0
12 Dessert Forks . . . 23 "	7	6	..	8	12	6
2 Gravy Spoons . . . 11 "	7	6	..	4	2	6
1 Soup Ladle . . . 11 "	7	6	..	4	2	6
4 Sauce Ladles . . . 11 "	8	0	..	4	8	0
4 Salt Spoons, gilt bowls			..	1	19	0
1 Mustard Spoon, ditto			..	0	10	6
1 Fish Slice	3	0	0
12 Tea Spoons . . . 14 at	8	0	..	5	12	0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	1	5	0
1 Moist Sugar Spoon	0	15	0
1 Sugar Sifter	1	3	0
1 Butter Knife	1	1	0

£75 11 0

King's Pattern, Richly Chased.

	oz.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Teapot	23	at	10 6	..	12 1	6
Sugar Basin . . . 13 "	"	11 6	..	7 9	6
Cream Ewer . . . 7 "	"	11 6	..	4 0	6
Coffee-pot 26 "	"	10 6	..	13 13	0

£37 4 6

WILLIAM S. BURTON'S GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY CATALOGUE may be had gratis and free by post. It contains upwards of 500 Illustrations of his illimited stock of Sterling Silver and Electro-Plate, Nickel Silver and Britannia Metal Goods, Dish Covers, Hot-Water Dishes, Stoves, Fenders, Marble Chimney Pieces, Kitchen Ranges, Lamps, Gasellers, Tea-Trays, Urns, and Kettles, Clocks, Table Cutlery, Baths, Toilet Ware, Turnery, Iron and Brass Bedsteads, Bedding, Bedroom Cabinet Furniture, &c., with Lists of Prices, and Plans of the Twenty large Showrooms at 39 OXFORD STREET, W.; 1, 1A, 2, 3, and 4 NEWMAN STREET; 4, 5, and 6 PERRY'S PLACE; and 1 NEWMAN MEWS, LONDON.

SANGSTER'S SILK AND ALPACA UMBRELLAS, ON FOX'S PARAGON FRAMES.

THESE WELL-KNOWN ARTICLES may be obtained of most Umbrella Dealers in the United Kingdom, and of the Patentees

W. & J. SANGSTER,

140 REGENT STREET, W.

94 FLEET STREET, E.C.

10 ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.

75 CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Wholesale List of Prices forwarded on application at the Manufactory,
75 Cheapside, E.C.

N.B.—SUN SHADES for HOT CLIMATES in GREAT VARIETY.

Joan Kenneby and Miriam Dockwra.

Guilty.

ORLEY FARM.

CHAPTER I.

HOW CAN I SAVE HIM?

‘I WILL not consent to live with you while such deeds as these are being done.’ Such were the last words which Mrs. Furnival spoke as she walked out of her own drawing-room, leaving her husband still seated in his arm-chair.

What was he to do? Those who would hang by the letter of the law in such matters may say that he should have rung the bell, sent for his wife, explained to her that obedience was a necessary duty on her part, and have finished by making her understand that she must and would continue to live wherever he chose that she should live. There be those who say that if a man be anything of a man, he can always insure obedience in his own household. He has the power of the purse and the power of the law; and if, having these, he goes to the wall, it must be because he is a poor creature. Those who so say have probably never tried the position.

Mr. Furnival did not wish to send for his wife, because by doing so he would have laid bare his sore before his servants. He could not follow her, because he knew that he should not find her alone in her room. Nor did he wish for any further parley, because he knew that she would speak loud, and probably sob—nay, very possibly proceed to a fainting fit. And, moreover, he much doubted whether he would have the power to keep her in the house if it should be her pleasure to leave it. And then what should he do? The doing of something in such a catastrophe, was, he thought, indispensable.

Was ever a man so ill treated? Was ever jealousy so groundless? Here was a woman, with whom he was on the point of quarrelling, who was engaged to be married to another man, whom for months past he had only seen as a client; and on her account he was to be told by his wife that she would not consent to live with him! Yes; it was quite indispensable that he should do something.

At last he went to bed, and slept upon it; not sharing the marital couch, but occupying his own dressing-room. In the morning, however, as he sat down to his solitary breakfast, he was as far as ever from having made up his mind what that something should be. A message was brought to him by an elderly female servant with a grave face,—the elderly servant who had lived with them since their poorer days,—saying that ‘Missus would not come down to breakfast this morning.’ There was no love sent, no excuse as to illness, no semblance of a peaceable reason, assumed even to deceive the servant. It was clear to Mr. Furnival that the servant was intended to know all about it. ‘And Miss Biggs says, sir, that if you please you’re not to wait for her.’

‘Very well, that’ll do,’ said Mr. Furnival, who had not the slightest intention of waiting for Miss Biggs; and then he sat himself down to eat his bacon, and bethink himself what step he would take with this recreant and troublesome spouse.

While he was thus employed the post came. The bulk of his letters as a matter of course went to his chambers; but there were those among his correspondents who wrote to him at Harley Street. To-day he received three or four letters, but our concern will be with one only. This one bore the Hamworth post-mark, and he opened it the first, knowing that it came from Lady Mason. It was as follows:—

‘Private.

‘THE CLEEVE, 23rd January, 18—.

‘MY DEAR MR. FURNIVAL,

‘I am so very sorry that I did not see you to-day! Indeed, your leaving without seeing me has made me unhappy, for I cannot but think that it shows that you are displeased. Under these circumstances I must write to you and explain to you how that came to pass which Sir Peregrine told you. I have not let him know that I am writing to you, and I think for his sake that I had better not. But he is so good, and has shown to me such nobleness and affection, that I can hardly bring myself to have any secret from him.

‘You may conceive what was my surprise when I first understood that he wished to make me his wife. It is hardly six months since I thought that I was almost exceeding my station in visiting at his house. Then by degrees I began to be received as a friend, and at last I found myself treated with the warmest love. But still I had no thought of this, and I knew that it was because of my great trouble that Sir Peregrine and Mrs. Orme were so good to me.

‘When he sent for me into his library and told me what he wished, I could not refuse him anything. I promised obedience to him as though I were a child; and in this way I found myself engaged to be his wife. When he told me that he would have it so, how could I refuse him, knowing as I do all that he has done for me, and thinking of it as I do every minute? As for loving him, of course I love him. Who that knows him does not love him? He is made to be loved. No one is so good and so noble as he. But of love of that sort I had never dreamed. Ah me, no!—a woman burdened as I am does not think of love.

‘He told me that he would have it so, and I said that I would obey him; and he tried to prove to me that in this dreadful trial it would be better for me. But I would not wish it on that account. He has done enough for me without my causing him such injury. When I argued it with him, trying to say that others would not like it, he declared that Mrs. Orme would be well pleased, and, indeed, so she told me afterwards herself. And thus I yielded to him, and agreed that I would be his wife. But I was not happy, thinking that I should injure him; and I promised only because I could not deny him.

‘But the day before yesterday young Mr. Orme, his grandson, came to me and told me that such a marriage would be very wrong. And I do believe him. He said that old family friends would look down upon his grandfather and ridicule him if he were to make this marriage. And I can see that it would be so. I would not have such injury come upon him for the gain of all the world to myself. So I have made up my mind to tell him that it cannot be, even though I should anger him. And I fear that it will anger him, for he loves to have his own way,—especially in doing good; and he thinks that our marriage would rescue me altogether from the danger of this trial.

‘So I have made up my mind to tell him, but I have not found courage to do it yet; and I do wish, dear Mr. Furnival, that I might see you first. I fear that I may have lost your friendship by what has already been done. If so, what will become of me? When I heard that you had gone without asking for me, my heart sank within me. I have two friends whom I so dearly love, and I would fain do as both direct me, if that may be possible. And now I propose to go up to London to-morrow, and to be at your chambers about one o’clock. I have told Sir Peregrine and Mrs. Orme that I am going; but he is too noble-minded to ask questions now that he thinks I may feel myself constrained to tell him. So I will call in Lincoln’s Inn at one o’clock, and I trust that if possible you will see me. I am greatly in want of your advice, for in truth I hardly know what to do.

‘Pray believe me to be always your attached friend,

‘MARY MASON.’

There was hardly a word,—I believe not a word in that letter that was not true. Her acceptance of Sir Peregrine had been given exactly in the manner and for the reasons there explained; and since she had accepted him she had been sorry for having done so, exactly in the way now described. She was quite willing to give up her husband if it was thought best,—but she was not willing to give up her friend. She was not willing to give up either friend, and her great anxiety was so to turn her conduct that she might keep them both.

Mr. Furnival was gratified as he read the letter—gratified in spite of his present frame of mind. Of course he would see her;—and of course, as he himself well knew, would take her again into favour. But he must insist on her carrying out her purpose of abandoning the marriage project. If, arising from this abandonment, there should be any coolness on the part of Sir Peregrine, Mr. Furnival would not regret it. Mr. Furnival did not feel quite sure whether in the conduct of this case he was not somewhat hampered by the—energetic zeal of Sir Peregrine's line of defence.

When he had finished the perusal of his letter and the consideration which it required, he put it carefully into his breast coat pocket, envelope and all. What might not happen if he left that envelope about in that house? And then he took it out again, and observed upon the cover the Hamworth post-mark, very clear. Post-marks now-a-days are very clear, and everybody may know whence a letter comes. His letters had been brought to him by the butler; but was it not probable that that ancient female servant might have seen them first, and have conveyed to her mistress intelligence as to this post-mark? If so—; and Mr. Furnival almost felt himself to be guilty as he thought of it.

While he was putting on his greatcoat in the hall, the butler assisting him, the ancient female servant came to him again. There was a look about her face which told of war, and declared her to be, if not the chief lieutenant of his wife, at any rate her colour-serjeant. Martha Biggs no doubt was chief lieutenant. 'Missus desires me to ask,' said she, with her grim face and austere voice, 'whether you will be pleased to dine at home to-day?' And yet the grim, austere woman could be affectionate and almost motherly in her ministrations to him when things were going well, and had eaten his salt and broken his bread for more than twenty years. All this was very hard! 'Because,' continued the woman, 'missus says she thinks she shall be out this evening herself.'

'Where is she going?'

'Missus didn't tell me, sir.'

He almost determined to go up-stairs and call upon her to tell him what she was going to do, but he remembered that if he did it would surely make a row in the house. Miss Biggs would put her head out of some adjacent door and scream, 'Oh laws!' and he would have to descend his own stairs with the consciousness that all his household were regarding him as a brute. So he gave up that project. 'No,' he said, 'I shall not dine at home;' and then he went his way.

'Missus is very aggravating,' said the butler, as soon as the door was closed.

'You don't know what cause she has, Spooner,' said the house-keeper very solemnly.

'Is it at his age? I believe it's all nonsense, I do;—feminine fancies, and vagaries of the weaker sex.'

'Yes, I dare say; that's what you men always say. But if he don't look out he'll find missus'll be too much for him. What'd he do if she were to go away from him?'

'Do?—why live twice as jolly. It would only be the first rumpus of the thing.'

I am afraid that there was some truth in what Spooner said. It is the first rumpus of the thing, or rather the fear of that, which keeps together many a couple.

At one o'clock there came a timid female rap at Mr. Furnival's chamber door, and the juvenile clerk gave admittance to Lady Mason. Crabwitz, since the affair of that mission down at Hamworth, had so far carried a point of his, that a junior satellite was now permanently installed; and for the future the indignity of opening doors, and 'just stepping out' into Chancery Lane, would not await him. Lady Mason was dressed all in black,—but this was usual with her when she left home. To-day, however, there was about her something blacker and more sombre than usual. The veil which she wore was thick, and completely hid her face; and her voice, as she asked for Mr. Furnival, was low and plaintive. But, nevertheless, she had by no means laid aside the charm of womanhood; or it might be more just to say that the charm of womanhood had not laid aside her. There was that in her figure, step, and gait of going which compelled men to turn round and look at her. We all know that she had a son some two or three and twenty years of age, and that she had not been quite a girl when she married. But, notwithstanding this, she was yet young; and though she made no effort—no apparent effort—to maintain the power and influence which beauty gives, yet she did maintain it.

He came forward and took her by the hand with all his old affectionate regard, and, muttering some words of ordinary salutation, led her to a chair. It may be that she muttered something also, but if so the sound was too low to reach his ears. She sat down where he placed her, and as she put her hand on the table near her arm, he saw that she was trembling.

'I got your letter this morning,' he said, by way of beginning the conversation.

'Yes,' she said; and then, finding that it was not possible that he should hear her through her veil, she raised it. She was very pale, and there was a look of painful care, almost of agony, round her mouth. He had never seen her look so pale,—but he said to himself at the same time that he had never seen her look so beautiful.

‘And to tell you the truth, Lady Mason, I was very glad to get it. You and I had better speak openly to each other about this;—had we not?’

‘Oh, yes,’ she said. And then there was a struggle within her not to tremble—a struggle that was only too evident. She was aware of this, and took her hand off the table.

‘I vexed you because I did not see you at The Cleeve the other day.’

‘Because I thought that you were angry with me.’

‘And I was so.’

‘Oh, Mr. Furnival!’

‘Wait a moment, Lady Mason. I was angry;—or rather sorry and vexed to hear of that which I did not approve. But your letter has removed that feeling. I can now understand the manner in which this engagement was forced upon you; and I understand also—do I not?—that the engagement will not be carried out?’

She did not answer him immediately, and he began to fear that she repented of her purpose. ‘Because,’ said he, ‘under no other circumstances could I——’

‘Stop, Mr. Furnival. Pray do not be severe with me.’ And she looked at him with eyes which would almost have melted his wife,—and which he was quite unable to withstand. Had it been her wish, she might have made him promise to stand by her, even though she had persisted in her engagement.

‘No, no; I will not be severe.’

‘I do not wish to marry him,’ she went on to say. ‘I have resolved to tell him so. That was what I said in my letter.’

‘Yes, yes.’

‘I do not wish to marry him. I would not bring his gray hairs with sorrow to the grave—no, not to save myself from——’ And then, as she thought of that from which she desired to save herself, she trembled again, and was silent.

‘It would create in men’s minds such a strong impression against you, were you to marry him at this moment!’

‘It is of him I am thinking;—of him and Lucius. Mr. Furnival, they might do their worst with me, if it were not for that thought. My boy!’ And then she rose from her chair, and stood upright before him, as though she were going to do or say some terrible thing. He still kept his chair, for he was startled, and hardly knew what he would be about. That last exclamation had come from her almost with a shriek, and now her bosom was heaving as though her heart would burst with the violence of her sobbing. 'I will go,' she said. 'I had better go.' And she hurried away towards the door.

'No, no; do not go yet.' And he rose to stop her, but she was quite passive. 'I do not know why you should be so much moved now.' But he did know. He did understand the very essence and core of her feelings;—as probably may the reader also. But it was impossible that he should allow her to leave him in her present state.

She sat down again, and leaning both her arms upon the table, hid her face within her hands. He was now standing, and for the moment did not speak to her. Indeed he could not bring himself to break the silence, for he saw her tears, and could still hear the violence of her sobs. And then she was the first to speak. 'If it were not for him,' she said, raising her head, 'I could bear it all. What will he do? what will he do?'

'You mean,' said Mr. Furnival, speaking very slowly, 'if the—verdict—should go against us.'

'It will go against us,' she said. 'Will it not?—tell me the truth. You are so clever, you must know. Tell me how it will go. Is there anything I can do to save him?' And she took hold of his arm with both her hands, and looked up eagerly—oh, with such terrible eagerness!—into his face.

Would it not have been natural now that he should have asked her to tell him the truth? And yet he did not dare to ask her. He thought that he knew it. He felt sure,—almost sure, that he could look into her very heart, and read there the whole of her secret. But still there was a doubt,—enough of doubt to make him wish to ask the question. Nevertheless he did not ask it.

'Mr. Furnival,' she said; and as she spoke there was a hardness came over the soft lines of her feminine face; a look of courage which amounted almost to ferocity, a look which at the moment recalled to his mind, as though it were but yesterday, the attitude and countenance she had borne as she stood in the witness-box at that other trial, now so many years since,—that attitude and countenance which had impressed the whole court with so high an idea of her courage. 'Mr. Furnival, weak as I am, I could bear to die here on the spot,—now—if I could only save him from this agony. It is not for myself I suffer.' And then the terrible idea occurred to him that she might attempt to compass her escape by death. But he did not know her. That would have been no escape for her son.

'And you too think that I must not marry him?' she said, putting up her hands to her brows as though to collect her thoughts.

'No; certainly not, Lady Mason.'

'No, no. It would be wrong. But, Mr. Furnival, I am so driven that I know not how I should act. What if I should lose my mind? And as she looked at him there was that about her eyes which did tell him that such an ending might be possible.

‘Do not speak in such a way,’ he said.

‘No, I will not. I know that it is wrong. I will go down there, and tell him that it must not,—must not be so. But I may stay at The Cleeve;—may I not?’

‘Oh, certainly—if he wishes it,—after your understanding with him.’

‘Ah; he may turn me out, may he not? And they are so kind to me, so gentle and so good. And Lucius is so stern. But I will go back. Sternness will perhaps be better for me now than love and kindness.’

In spite of everything, in the teeth of his almost certain conviction of her guilt, he would now, even now, have asked her to come to his own house, and have begged her to remain there till the trial was over,—if only he had had the power to do so. What would it be to him what the world might say, if she should be proved guilty? Why should not he have been mistaken as well as others? And he had an idea that if he could get her into his own hands he might still bring her through triumphantly,—with assistance from Solomon Aram and Chaffanbrass. He was strongly convinced of her guilt, but by no means strongly convinced that her guilt could be proved. But then he had no house at the present moment that he could call his own. His Kitty, the Kitty of whom he still sometimes thought with affection,—that Kitty whose soft motherly heart would have melted at such a story of a woman’s sorrows, if only it had been rightly approached,—that Kitty was now vehemently hostile, hostile both to him and to this very woman for whom he would have asked her care.

‘May God help me!’ said the poor woman. ‘I do not know where else to turn for aid. Well; I may go now then. And, indeed, why should I take up your time further?’

But before she did go, Mr. Furnival gave her much counsel. He did not ask as to her guilt, but he did give her that advice which he would have thought most expedient had her guilt been declared and owned. He told her that very much would depend on her maintaining her present position and standing; that she was so to carry herself as not to let people think that she was doubtful about the trial; and that above all things she was to maintain a composed and steadfast manner before her son. As to the Ormes, he bade her not to think of leaving The Cleeve, unless she found that her remaining there would be disagreeable to Sir Peregrine after her explanation with him. That she was to decline the marriage engagement, he was very positive; on that subject there was to be no doubt.

And then she went; and as she passed down the dark passage into the new square by the old gate of the Chancellor's court, she met a stout lady. The stout lady eyed her savagely, but was not quite sure as to her identity. Lady Mason in her trouble passed the stout lady without taking any notice of her.

CHAPTER II.

JOHN KENNEBY GOES TO HAMWORTH.

WHEN John Kenneby dined with his sister and brother-in-law on Christmas-day he agreed, at the joint advice of the whole party there assembled, that he would go down and see Mr. Dockwrath at Hamworth, in accordance with the invitation received from that gentleman;—his enemy, Dockwrath, who had carried off Miriam Usbech, for whom John Kenneby still sighed,—in a gentle easy manner indeed,—but still sighed as though it were an affair but of yesterday. But though he had so agreed, and though he had never stirred from that resolve, he by no means did it immediately. He was a slow man, whose life had offered him but little excitement; and the little which came to him was husbanded well and made to go a long way. He thought about this journey for nearly a month before he took it, often going to his sister and discussing it with her, and once or twice seeing the great Moulder himself. At last he fixed a day and did go down to Hamworth.

He had, moreover, been invited to the offices of Messrs. Round and Crook, and that visit also was as yet unpaid. A clerk from the house in Bedford Row had found him out at Hubbles and Grease's, and had discovered that he would be forthcoming as a witness. On the special subject of his evidence not much had then passed, the clerk having had no discretion given him to sift the matter. But Kenneby had promised to go to Bedford Row, merely stipulating for a day at some little distance of time. That day was now near at hand; but he was to see Dockwrath first, and hence it occurred that he now made his journey to Hamworth.

But another member of that Christmas party at Great St. Helen's had not been so slow in carrying out his little project. Mr. Kantwise had at once made up his mind that it would be as well that he should see Dockwrath. It would not suit him to incur the expense of a journey to Hamworth, even with the additional view of extracting payment for that set of metallic furniture; but he wrote to the attorney telling him that he should be in London in the way of trade on such and such a day, and that he had tidings of importance to give with reference to the great Orley Farm case.

Dockwrath did see him, and the result was that Mr. Kantwise got his money, fourteen eleven;—at least he got fourteen seven six, and had a very hard fight for the three odd half-crowns,—and Dockwrath learned that John Kenneby, if duly used, would give evidence on his side of the question.

And then Kenneby did go down to Hamworth. He had not seen Miriam Usbech since the days of her marriage. He had remained hanging about the neighbourhood long enough to feast his eyes with the agony of looking at the bride, and then he had torn himself away. Circumstances since that had carried him one way and Miriam another, and they had never met. Time had changed him very little, and what change time had made was perhaps for the better. He hesitated less when he spoke, he was less straggling and undecided in his appearance, and had about him more of manhood than in former days. But poor Miriam had certainly not been altered for the better by years and circumstances as far as outward appearance went.

Kenneby as he walked up from the station to the house,—and from old remembrances he knew well where the house stood,—gave up his mind entirely to the thought of seeing Miriam, and in his memories of old love passages almost forgot the actual business which now brought him to the place. To him it seemed as though he was going to meet the same Miriam he had left,—the Miriam to whom in former days he had hardly ventured to speak of love, and to whom he must not now venture so to speak at all. He almost blushed as he remembered that he would have to take her hand.

There are men of this sort, men slow in their thoughts but very keen in their memories; men who will look for the glance of a certain bright eye from a window-pane, though years have rolled on since last they saw it,—since last they passed that window. Such men will bethink themselves, after an interval of weeks, how they might have brought up wit to their use and improved an occasion which chance had given them. But when the bright eyes do glance, such men pass by abashed; and when the occasion offers, their wit is never at hand. Nevertheless they are not the least happy of mankind, these never-readies; they do not pick up sudden prizes, but they hold fast by such good things as the ordinary run of life bestows upon them. There was a lady even now, a friend of Mrs. Moulder, ready to bestow herself and her fortune on John Kenneby,—a larger fortune than Miriam had possessed, and one which would not now probably be neutralized by so large a family as poor Miriam had bestowed upon her husband.

How would Miriam meet him? It was of this he thought, as he approached the door. Of course he must call her Mrs. Dockwrath, though the other name was so often on his tongue. He had made up his mind, for the last week past, that he would call at the private door of the house, passing by the door of the office. Otherwise the chances were that he would not see Miriam at all. His enemy, Dockwrath, would be sure to keep him from her presence. Dockwrath had ever been inordinately jealous. But when he came to the office-door he hardly had the courage to pass on to that of the private dwelling. His heart beat too quickly, and the idea of seeing Miriam was almost too much for him. But, nevertheless, he did carry out his plan, and did knock at the door of the house.

And it was opened by Miriam herself. He knew her instantly in spite of all the change. He knew her, but the whole course of his feelings were altered at the moment, and his blood was made to run the other way. And she knew him too. 'La, John,' she said, 'who'd have thought of seeing you?' And she shifted the baby whom she carried from one arm to the other as she gave him her hand in token of welcome.

'It is a long time since we met,' he said. He felt hardly any temptation now to call her Miriam. Indeed it would have seemed altogether in opposition to the common order of things to do so. She was no longer Miriam, but the maternal Dockwrath;—the mother of that long string of dirty children whom he saw gathered in the passage behind her. He had known as a fact that she had all the children, but the fact had not made the proper impression on his mind till he had seen them.

'A long time! 'Deed then it is. Why we've hardly seen each other since you used to be a courting of me; have we? But, my! John; why haven't you got a wife for yourself these many years? But come in. I'm glad to see every bit of you, so I am; though I've hardly a place to put you to sit down in.' And then she opened a door and took him into a little sitting-room on the left-hand side of the passage.

His feeling of intense enmity to Dockwrath was beginning to wear away, and one of modified friendship for the whole family was supervening. It was much better that it should be so. He could not understand before how Dockwrath had had the heart to write to him and call him John, but now he did understand it. He felt that he could himself be friendly with Dockwrath now, and forgive him all the injury; he felt also that it would not go so much against the grain with him to marry that friend as to whom his sister would so often solicit him.

'I think you may venture to sit down upon them,' said Miriam, 'though I can't say that I have ever tried myself.' This speech referred to the chairs with which her room was supplied, and which Kenneby seemed to regard with suspicion.

'They are very nice I'm sure,' said he, 'but I don't think I ever saw any like them.'

'Nor nobody else either. But don't you tell him so,' and she nodded with her head to the side of the house on which the office stood. 'I had as nice a set of mahoganys as ever a woman could want, and bought with my own money too, John; but he's took them away to furnish some of his lodgings opposite, and put them things here in their place. Don't, Sam; you'll have 'em all twisted about nohows in no time if you go to use 'em in that way.'

'I wants to see the pictur' on the table,' said Sam.

'Drat the picture,' said Mrs. Dockwrath. 'It was hard, wasn't it, John, to see my own mahoganys, as I had rubbed with my own hands till they was ever so bright, and as was bought with my own money too, took away and them things brought here? Sam, if you twist that round any more, I'll box your ears. One can't hear oneself speak with the noise.'

'They don't seem to be very useful,' said Kenneby.

'Useful! They're got up for cheaterly;—that's what they're got up for. And that Dockwrath should be took in with 'em—he that's so sharp at everything,—that's what surprises me. But laws, John, it isn't the sharp ones that gets the best off. You was never sharp, but you're as smirk and smooth as though you came out of a band-box. I am glad to see you, John, so I am.' And she put her apron up to her eyes and wiped away a tear.

'Is Mr. Dockwrath at home?' said John.

'Sam, run round and see if your father's in the office. He'll be home to dinner, I know. Molly, do be quiet with your sister. I never see such a girl as you are for bothering. You didn't come down about business, did you, John?' And then Kenneby explained to her that he had been summoned by Dockwrath as to the matter of this Orley Farm trial. While he was doing so, Sam returned to say that his father had stepped out, but would be back in half an hour, and Mrs. Dockwrath, finding it impossible to make use of her company sitting-room, took her old lover into the family apartment which they all ordinarily occupied.

'You can sit down there at any rate without it all crunching under you, up to nothing.' And she emptied for him as she spoke the seat of an old well-worn horse-hair bottomed arm-chair. 'As to them tin things I wouldn't trust myself on one of them; and so I told him, angry as it made him. But now about poor Lady Mason——. Sam and Molly, you go into the garden, there's good children. They is so ready with their ears, John; and he contrives to get everything out of 'em. Now do tell me about this.'

Kenneby could not help thinking that the love match between Miriam and her husband had not turned out in all respects well, and I fear that he derived from the thought a certain feeling of consolation. 'He' was spoken about in a manner that did not betoken unfailing love and perfect confidence. Perhaps Miriam was at this moment thinking that she might have done better with her youth and her money! She was thinking of nothing of the kind. Her mind was one that dwelt on the present, not on the past. She was unhappy about her furniture, unhappy about the frocks of those four younger children, unhappy that the loaves of bread went faster and faster every day, very unhappy now at the savageness with which her husband prosecuted his anger against Lady Mason. But it did not occur to her to be unhappy because she had not become Mrs. Kenneby.

Mrs. Dockwrath had more to tell in the matter than had Kenneby, and when the elder of the children who were at home had been disposed of she was not slow to tell it. 'Isn't it dreadful, John, to think that they should come against her now, and the will all settled as it was twenty year ago? But you won't say anything against her; will you now, John? She was always a good friend to you; wasn't she? Though it wasn't much use; was it?' It was thus that she referred to the business before them, and to the love passages of her early youth at the same time.

'It's a very dreadful affair,' said Kenneby, very solemnly; 'and the more I think of it the more dreadful it becomes.'

'But you won't say anything against her, will you? You won't go over to his side; eh, John?'

'I don't know much about sides,' said he.

'He'll get himself into trouble with it; I know he will. I do so wish you'd tell him, for he can't hurt you if you stand up to him. If I speak,—Lord bless you, I don't dare to call my soul my own for a week afterwards.'

'Is he so very——'

'Oh, dreadful, John. He's bid me never speak a word to her. But for all that I used till she went away down to The Cleeve yonder. And what do you think they say now? And I do believe it too. They say that Sir Peregrine is going to make her his lady. If he does that it stands to reason that Dockwrath and Joseph Mason will get the worst of it. I'm sure I hope they will; only he'll be twice as hard if he don't make money by it in some way.'

'Will he, now?'

'Indeed he will. You never knew anything like him for hardness if things go wrong awhile. I know he's got lots of money, because he's always buying up bits of houses; besides, what has he done with mine? but yet sometimes you'd hardly think he'd let me have bread enough for the children—and as for clothes——!' Poor Miriam! It seemed that her husband shared with her but few of the spoils or triumphs of his profession.

Tidings now came in the office that Dockwrath was there. 'You'll come round and eat a bit of dinner with us?' said she, hesitatingly. He felt that she hesitated, and hesitated himself in his reply. 'He must say something in the way of asking you, you know, and then say you'll come. His manner's nothing to you, you know. Do now. It does me good to look at you, John; it does indeed.' And then, without making any promise, he left her and went round to the office.

Kenneby had made up his mind, talking over the matter with Moulder and his sister, that he would be very reserved in any communication which he might make to Dockwrath as to his possible evidence at the coming trial; but nevertheless when Dockwrath had got him into his office, the attorney made him give a succinct account of everything he knew, taking down his deposition in a regular manner. 'And now if you'll just sign that,' Dockwrath said to him when he had done.

'I don't know about signing,' said Kenneby. 'A man should never write his own name unless he knows why.'

'You must sign your own deposition;' and the attorney frowned at him and looked savage. 'What would a judge say to you in court if you had made such a statement as this, affecting the character of a woman like Lady Mason, and then had refused to sign it? You'd never be able to hold up your head again.'

'Wouldn't I?' said Kenneby gloomily; and he did sign it. This was a great triumph to Dockwrath. Mat Round had succeeded in getting the deposition of Bridget Bolster, but he had got that of John Kenneby.

'And now,' said Dockwrath, 'I'll tell you what we'll do;—we'll go to the Blue Posts—you remember the Blue Posts?—and I'll stand a beef steak and a glass of brandy and water. I suppose you'll go back to London by the 3 p.m. train. We shall have lots of time.'

Kenneby said that he should go back by the 3 p.m. train, but he declined, with considerable hesitation, the beef steak and brandy and water. After what had passed between him and Miriam he could not go to the Blue Posts with her husband.

'Nonsense, man,' said Dockwrath. 'You must dine somewhere.'

But Kenneby said that he should dine in London. He always preferred dining late. Besides, it was a long time since he had been at Hamworth, and he was desirous of taking a walk that he might renew his associations.

'Associations!' said Dockwrath with a sneer. According to his ideas a man could have no pleasant associations with a place unless he had made money there or been in some way successful. Now John Kenneby had enjoyed no success at Hamworth. 'Well then, if you prefer associations to the Blue Posts I'll say good-bye to you. I don't understand it myself. We shall see each other at the trial you know.' Kenneby with a sigh said that he supposed they should.

'Are you going into the house,' said Dockwrath, 'to see her again?' and he indicated with his head the side on which his wife was, as she before had indicated his side.

'Well, yes; I think I'll say good-bye.'

'Don't be talking to her about this affair. She understands nothing about it, and everything goes up to that woman at Orley Farm.' And so they parted.

'And he wanted you to go to the Blue Posts, did he?' said Miriam when she heard of the proposition. 'It's like him. If there is to be any money spent it's anywhere but at home.'

'But I aint going,' said John.

'He'll go before the day's out, though he mayn't get his dinner there. And he'll be ever so free when he's there. He'll stand brandy and water to half Hamworth when he thinks he can get anything by it; but if you'll believe me, John, though I've all the fag of the house on me, and all them children, I can't get a pint of beer—not regular—betwixt breakfast and bedtime.' Poor Miriam! Why had she not taken advice when she was younger? John Kenneby would have given her what beer was good for her, quite regularly.

Then he went out and took his walk, sauntering away to the gate of Orley Farm, and looking up the avenue. He ventured up some way, and there at a distance before him he saw Lucius Mason walking up and down, from the house towards the road and back again, swinging a heavy stick in his hand, with his hat pressed down over his brows. Kenneby had no desire to speak to him; so he returned to the gate, and thence went back to the station, escaping the town by a side lane; and in this way he got back to London without holding further communication with the people of Hamworth.

CHAPTER III.

JOHN KENNEBY'S COURTSHIP.

'SHE's as sweet a temper, John, as ever stirred a lump of sugar in her tea,' said Mrs. Moulder to her brother, as they sat together over the fire in Great St. Helen's on that same evening,—after his return from Hamworth. 'That she is,—and so Smiley always found her. "She's always the same," Smiley said to me many a day. And what can a man want more than that?'

'That's quite true,' said John.

'And then as to her habits—I never knew her take a drop too much since first I set eyes on her, and that's nigh twenty years ago.'

She likes things comfortable;—and why shouldn't she, with two hundred a year of her own coming out of the Kingsland Road brick-fields? As for dress, her things is beautiful, and she is the woman that takes care of 'em! Why, I remember an Irish tabinet as Smiley gave her when first that venture in the brick-fields came up money; if that tabinet is as much as turned yet, why, I'll eat it. And then, the best of it is, she'll have you to-morrow. Indeed she will; or to-night, if you'll ask her. Goodness gracious! if there aint Moulder!' And the excellent wife jumped up from her seat, poked the fire, emptied the most comfortable arm-chair, and hurried out to the landing at the top of the stairs. Presently the noise of a loudly wheezing pair of lungs was heard, and the commercial traveller, enveloped from head to foot in coats and comforters, made his appearance. He had just returned from a journey, and having deposited his parcels and packages at the house of business of Hubbles and Grease in Houndsditch, had now returned to the bosom of his family. It was a way he had, not to let his wife know exactly the period of his return. Whether he thought that by so doing he might keep her always on the alert and ready for marital inspection, or whether he disliked to tie himself down by the obligation of a fixed time for his return, Mrs. Moulder had never made herself quite sure. But on neither view of the subject did she admire this practice of her lord. She had on many occasions pointed out to him how much more snug she could make him if he would only let her know when he was coming. But he had never taken the hint, and in these latter days she had ceased to give it.

'Why, I'm uncommon cold,' he said in answer to his wife's inquiries after his welfare. 'And so would you be too, if you'd come up from Leeds since you'd had your dinner. What, John, are you there? The two of you are making yourself snug enough, I suppose, with something hot?'

'Not a drop he's had yet since he's been in the house,' said Mrs. Moulder. 'And he's hardly as much as darkened the door since you left it.' And Mrs. Moulder added, with some little hesitation in her voice, 'Mrs. Smiley is coming in to-night, Moulder.'

'The d—— she is! There's always something of that kind when I gets home tired out, and wants to be comfortable. I mean to have my supper to myself, as I likes it, if all the Mother Smileys in London choose to come the way. What on earth is she coming here for this time of night?'

'Why, Moulder, you know.'

'No; I don't know. I only know this, that when a man's used up with business he don't want to have any of that nonsense under his nose.'

'If you mean me——' began John Kenneby.

'I don't mean you; of course not; and I don't mean anybody.'

Here, take my coats, will you? and let me have a pair of slippers. If Mrs. Smiley thinks that I'm going to change my pants, or put myself about for her——'

'Laws, Moulder, she don't expect that.'

'She won't get it any way. Here's John dressed up as if he was going to a box in the the-atre. And you—why should you be going to expense, and knocking out things that costs money, because Mother Smiley's coming? I'll Smiley her.'

'Now, Moulder——' But Mrs. Moulder knew that it was of no use speaking to him at the present moment. Her task should be this,—to feed and cosset him if possible into good humour before her guest should arrive. Her praises of Mrs. Smiley had been very fairly true. But nevertheless she was a lady who had a mind and voice of her own, as any lady has a right to possess who draws in her own right two hundred a year out of a brick-field in the Kingsland Road. Such a one knows that she is above being snubbed, and Mrs. Smiley knew this of herself as well as any lady; and if Moulder, in his wrath, should call her Mother Smiley, or give her to understand that he regarded her as an old woman, that lady would probably walk herself off in great dudgeon,—herself and her share in the brick-field. To tell the truth, Mrs. Smiley required that considerable deference should be paid to her.

Mrs. Moulder knew well what was her husband's present ailment. He had dined as early as one, and on his journey up from Leeds to London had refreshed himself with drink only. That last glass of brandy which he had taken at the Peterborough station had made him cross. If she could get him to swallow some hot food before Mrs. Smiley came, all might yet be well.

'And what's it to be, M.?' she said in her most insinuating voice — 'there's a lovely chop down stairs, and there's nothing so quick as that.'

'Chop!' he said, and it was all he did say at the moment.

'There's a 'am in beautiful cut,' she went on, showing by the urgency of her voice how anxious she was on the subject.

For the moment he did not answer her at all, but sat facing the fire, and running his fat fingers through his uncombed hair. 'Mrs. Smiley!' he said; 'I remember when she was kitchen-maid at old Pott's.'

'She aint nobody's kitchen-maid now,' said Mrs. Moulder, almost prepared to be angry in the defence of her friend.

'And I never could make out when it was that Smiley married her,—that is, if he ever did.'

'Now, Moulder, that's shocking of you. Of course he married her. She and I is nearly an age as possible, though I think she is a year over me. She says not, and it aint nothing to me. But I remember the wedding as if it was yesterday. You and I had never set eyes on each other then, M.' This last she added in a plaintive tone, hoping to soften him.

'Are you going to keep me here all night without anything?' he then said. 'Let me have some whisky,—hot, with;—and don't stand there looking at nothing.'

'But you'll take some solids with it, Moulder? Why it stands to reason you'll be famished.'

'Do as you're bid, will you, and give me the whisky. Are you going to tell me when I'm to eat and when I'm to drink, like a child?' This he said in that tone of voice which made Mrs. Moulder know that he meant to be obeyed; and though she was sure that he would make himself drunk, she was compelled to minister to his desires. She got the whisky and hot water, the lemon and sugar, and set the things beside him; and then she retired to the sofa. John Kenneby the while sat perfectly silent looking on. Perhaps he was considering whether he would be able to emulate the domestic management of Dockwrath or of Moulder when he should have taken to himself Mrs. Smiley and the Kingsland brick-field.

'If you've a mind to help yourself, John, I suppose you'll do it,' said Moulder.

'None for me just at present, thank'ee,' said Kenneby.

'I suppose you wouldn't swallow nothing less than wine in them togs?' said the other, raising his glass to his lips. 'Well, here's better luck, and I'm blessed if it's not wanting. I'm pretty well tired of this go, and so I mean to let 'em know pretty plainly.'

All this was understood by Mrs. Moulder, who knew that it only signified that her husband was half tipsy, and that in all probability he would be whole tipsy before long. There was no help for it. Were she to remonstrate with him in his present mood, he would very probably fling the bottle at her head. Indeed, remonstrances were never of avail with him. So she sat herself down, thinking how she would run down when she heard Mrs. Smiley's step, and beg that lady to postpone her visit. Indeed it would be well to send John to convey her home again.

Moulder swallowed his glass of hot toddy fast, and then mixed another. His eyes were very bloodshot, and he sat staring at the fire. His hands were thrust into his pockets between the periods of his drinking, and he no longer spoke to any one. 'I'm —— if I stand it,' he growled forth, addressing himself. 'I've stood it a —— deal too long.' And then he finished the second glass. There was a sort of understanding on the part of his wife that such interjections as these referred to Hubbles and Grease, and indicated a painfully advanced state of drink. There was one hope; the double heat, that of the fire and of the whisky, might make him sleep; and if so, he would be safe for two or three hours.

'I'm blessed if I do, and that's all,' said Moulder, grasping the whisky-bottle for the third time. His wife sat behind him very anxious, but not daring to interfere. 'It's going over the table, M.,' she then said.

'D—— the table!' he answered; and then his head fell forward on his breast, and he was fast asleep with the bottle in his hand.

'Put your hand to it, John,' said Mrs. Moulder in a whisper. But John hesitated. The lion might rouse himself if his prey were touched.

'He'll let it go easy if you put your hand to it. 'He's safe enough now. There. If we could only get him back from the fire a little, or his face'll be burnt off of him.'

'But you wouldn't move him?'

'Well, yes; we'll try. I've done it before, and he's never stirred. Come here, just behind. The casters is good, I know. Laws! aint he heavy?' And then they slowly dragged him back. He grunted out some half-pronounced threat as they moved him; but he did not stir, and his wife knew that she was again mistress of the room for the next two hours. It was true that he snored horribly, but then she was used to that.

'You won't let her come up, will you?' said John.

'Why not? She knows what men is as well I do. Smiley wasn't that way often, I believe; but he was awful when he was. He wouldn't sleep it off, quite innocent, like that; but would break everything about the place, and then cry like a child after it. Now Moulder's got none of that about him. The worst of it is, how am I ever to get him into bed when he wakes?'

While the anticipation of this great trouble was still on her mind, the ring at the bell was heard, and John Kenneby went down to the outer door that he might pay to Mrs. Smiley the attention of waiting upon her up stairs. And up stairs she came, bristling with silk—the identical Irish tabinet, perhaps, which had never been turned—and conscious of the business which had brought her.

'What—Moulder's asleep is he?' she said as she entered the room. 'I suppose that's as good as a pair of gloves, any way.'

'He aint just very well,' said Mrs. Moulder, winking at her friend; 'he's tired after a long journey.'

'Oh—h! ah—h!' said Mrs. Smiley, looking down upon the sleeping beauty, and understanding everything at a glance. 'It's uncommon bad for him, you know, because he's so given to flesh.'

'It's as much fatigue as anything,' said the wife.

'Yes, I dare say;' and Mrs. Smiley shook her head. 'If he fatigues himself so much as that often he'll soon be off the hooks.'

Much was undoubtedly to be borne from two hundred a year in a brick-field, especially when that two hundred a year was coming so very near home; but there is an amount of impertinent familiarity which must be put down even in two hundred a year. 'I've known worse cases than him, my dear; and that ended worse.'

‘Oh, I dare say. But you’re mistook if you mean Smiley. It was ’sepilus as took him off, as everybody knows.’

‘Well, my dear, I’m sure I’m not going to say anything against that. And now, John, do help her off with her bonnet and shawl, while I get the tea-things.’

Mrs. Smiley was a firm set, healthy-looking woman of—about forty. She had large, dark, glassy eyes, which were bright without sparkling. Her cheeks were very red, having a fixed settled colour that never altered with circumstances. Her black wiry hair was ended in short crisp curls, which sat close to her head. It almost collected like a wig, but the hair was in truth her own. Her mouth was small, and her lips thin, and they gave to her face a look of sharpness that was not quite agreeable. Nevertheless she was not a bad-looking woman, and with such advantages as two hundred a year and the wardrobe which Mrs. Moulder had described, was no doubt entitled to look for a second husband.

‘Well, Mr. Kenneby, and how do you find yourself this cold weather? Dear, how he do snore; don’t he?’

‘Yes,’ said Kenneby, very thoughtfully, ‘he does rather.’ He was thinking of Miriam Usbech as she was twenty years ago, and of Mrs. Smiley as she appeared at present. Not that he felt inclined to grumble at the lot prepared for him, but that he would like to take a few more years to think about it.

And then they sat down to tea. The lovely chops which Moulder had despised, and the ham in beautiful cut which had failed to tempt him, now met with due appreciation. Mrs. Smiley, though she had never been known to take a drop too much, did like to have things comfortable; and on this occasion she made an excellent meal, with a large pocket-handkerchief of Moulder’s—brought in for the occasion—stretched across the broad expanse of the Irish tabinet. ‘We sha’n’t wake him, shall we?’ said she, as she took her last bit of muffin.

‘Not till he wakes natural, of hisself,’ said Mrs. Moulder. ‘When he’s worked it off, he’ll rouse himself, and I shall have to get him to bed.’

‘He’ll be a bit patchy then, won’t he?’

‘Well, just for a while of course he will,’ said Mrs. Moulder. ‘But there’s worse than him. To-morrow morning, maybe, he’ll be just as sweet as sweet. It don’t hang about him, sullen like. That’ what I hate, when it hangs about ’em.’ Then the tea-things were taken away, Mrs. Smiley in her familiarity assisting in the removal, and—in spite of the example now before them—some more sugar and some more spirits, and some more hot water were put upon the table. ‘Well, I don’t mind just the least taste in life, Mrs. Moulder, as we’re quite between friends; and I’m sure you’ll want it to-night to keep yourself up.’ Mrs. Moulder would have answered these last words with some severity had she not felt that good humour now might be of great value to her brother.

'Well, John, and what is it you've got to say to her?' said Mrs. Moulder, as she put down her empty glass. Between friends who understood each other so well, and at their time of life, what was the use of ceremony?

'La, Mrs. Moulder, what should he have got to say? Nothing I'm sure as I'd think of listening to.'

'You try her, John.'

'Not but what I've the greatest respect in life for Mr. Kenneby, and always did have. If you must have anything to do with men, I've always said, recommend me to them as is quiet and steady, and hasn't got too much of the gab;—a quiet man is the man for me any day.'

'Well, John?' said Mrs. Moulder.

'Now, Mrs. Moulder, can't you keep yourself to yourself, and we shall do very well. Laws, how he do snore! When his head goes bobbling that way I do so fear he'll have a fit.'

'No he won't; he's coming to, all right. Well, John?'

'I'm sure I shall be very happy,' said John, 'if she likes it. She says that she respects me, and I'm sure I've a great respect for her. I always had—even when Mr. Smiley was alive.'

'It's very good of you to say so,' said she; not speaking however as though she were quite satisfied. What was the use of his remembering Smiley just at present?

'Enough's enough between friends any day,' said Mrs. Moulder. 'So give her your hand, John.'

'I think it'll be right to say one thing first,' said Kenneby, with a solemn and deliberate tone.

'And what's that?' said Mrs. Smiley, eagerly.

'In such a matter as this,' continued Kenneby, 'where the hearts are concerned——'

'You didn't say anything about hearts yet,' said Mrs. Smiley, with some measure of approbation in her voice.

'Didn't I,' said Kenneby. 'Then it was an omission on my part, and I beg leave to apologize. But what I was going to say is this: when the hearts are concerned, everything should be honest and above-board.'

'Oh of course,' said Mrs. Moulder; 'and I'm sure she don't suspect nothing else.'

'You'd better let him go on,' said Mrs. Smiley.

'My heart has not been free from woman's lovely image.'

'And isn't free now, is it, John?' said Mrs. Moulder.

'I've had my object, and though she's been another's, still I've kept her image on my heart.'

'But it aint there any longer, John? He's speaking of twenty years ago, Mrs. Smiley.'

'It's quite beautiful to hear him,' said Mrs. Smiley. 'Go on, Mr. Kenneby.'

'The years are gone by as though they was nothing, and still I've had her image on my heart. I've seen her to-day.'

'Her gentleman's still alive, aint he?' asked Mrs. Smiley.

'And likely to live,' said Mrs. Moulder.

'I've seen her to-day,' Kenneby continued; 'and now the Adriatic's free to wed another.'

Neither of the ladies present exactly understood the force of the quotation; but as it contained an appropriate reference to marriage, and apparently to a second marriage, it was taken by both of them in good part. He was considered to have made his offer, and Mrs. Smiley thereupon formally accepted him. 'He's spoke quite handsome, I'm sure,' said Mrs. Smiley to his sister; 'and I don't know that any woman has a right to expect more. As to the brick-fields——.' And then there was a slight reference to business, with which it will not be necessary that the readers of this story should embarrass themselves.

Soon after that Mr. Kenneby saw Mrs. Smiley home in a cab, and poor Mrs. Moulder sat by her lord till he roused himself from his sleep. Let us hope that her troubles with him were as little vexatious as possible; and console ourselves with the reflection that at twelve o'clock the next morning, after the second bottle of soda and brandy, he was 'as sweet as sweet.'

CHAPTER IV.

SHOWING HOW LADY MASON COULD BE VERY NOBLE.

LADY MASON returned to The Cleeve after her visit to Mr. Furnival's chambers, and nobody asked her why she had been to London or whom she had seen. Nothing could be more gracious than the deference which was shown to her, and the perfect freedom of action which was accorded to her. On that very day Lady Staveley had called at The Cleeve, explaining to Sir Peregrine and Mrs. Orme that her visit was made expressly to Lady Mason. 'I should have called at Orley Farm, of course,' said Lady Staveley, 'only that I hear that Lady Mason is likely to prolong her visit with you. I must trust to you, Mrs. Orme, to make all that understood.' Sir Peregrine took upon himself to say that it all should be understood, and then drawing Lady Staveley aside, told her of his own intended marriage. 'I cannot but be aware,' he said, 'that I have no business to trouble you with an affair that is so exclusively our own; but I have a wish, which perhaps you may understand, that there should be no secret about it. I think it better, for her sake, that it should be known. If the connection can be of any service to her, she should reap that benefit now, when some people are treating her name with a barbarity which I believe to be almost unparalleled in this country.' In answer to this Lady Staveley was of course obliged to congratulate him, and she did so with the best grace in her power; but it was not easy to say much that was cordial, and as she drove back with Mrs. Arbuthnot to Noningsby the words which were said between them as to Lady Mason were not so kindly meant towards that lady as their remarks on their journey to The Cleeve.

Lady Staveley had hoped,—though she had hardly expressed her hope even to herself, and certainly had not spoken of it to any one else,—that she might have been able to say a word or two to Mrs. Orme about young Peregrine, a word or two that would have shown her own good feeling towards the young man,—her own regard, and almost affection for him, even though this might have been done without any mention of Madeline's name. She might have learned in this way whether young Orme had made known at home what had been his hopes and what his disappointments, and might have formed some opinion whether or no he would renew his suit. She would not have been the first to mention her daughter's name; but if Mrs. Orme should speak of it, then the subject would be free for her, and she could let it be known that the heir of The Cleeve should at any rate have her sanction and good will. What happiness could be so great for her as that of having a daughter so settled, within eight miles of her? And then it was not only that a marriage between her daughter and Peregrine Orme would be an event so fortunate, but also that those feelings with reference to Felix Graham were so unfortunate! That young heart, she thought, could not as yet be heavy laden, and it might be possible that the whole affair should be made to run in the proper course,—if only it could be done at once. But now, that tale which Sir Peregrine had told her respecting himself and Lady Mason had made it quite impossible that anything should be said on the other subject. And then again, if it was decreed that the Noningsby family and the family of The Cleeve should be connected, would not such a marriage as this between the baronet and Lady Mason be very injurious? So that Lady Staveley was not quite happy as she returned to her own house.

Lady Staveley's message, however, for Lady Mason was given with all its full force. Sir Peregrine had felt grateful for what had been done, and Mrs. Orme, in talking of it, made quite the most of it. Civility from the Staveleys to the Ormes would not, in the ordinary course of things, be accounted of any special value. The two families might, and naturally would, know each other on intimate terms. But the Ormes would as a matter of course stand the highest in general estimation. Now, however, the Ormes had to bear up Lady Mason with them. Sir Peregrine had so willed it, and Mrs. Orme had not for a moment thought of contesting the wish of one whose wishes she had never contested. No words were spoken on the subject; but still with both of them there was a feeling that Lady Staveley's countenance and open friendship would be of value. When it had come to this with Sir Peregrine Orme, he was already disgraced in his own estimation,—already disgraced, although he declared to himself a thousand times that he was only doing his duty as a gentleman.

On that evening Lady Mason said no word of her new purpose. She had pledged herself both to Peregrine Orme and to Mr. Furnival. To both she had made a distinct promise that she would break off her engagement, and she knew well that the deed should be done at once. But how was she to do it? With what words was she to tell him that she had changed her mind and would not take the hand that he had offered to her? She feared to be a moment alone with Peregrine lest he should tax her with the non-fulfilment of her promise. But in truth Peregrine at the present moment was thinking more of another matter. It had almost come home to him that his grandfather's marriage might facilitate his own; and though he still was far from reconciling himself to the connection with Lady Mason, he was almost disposed to put up with it.

On the following day, at about noon, a chariot with a pair of post-horses was brought up to the door of The Cleeve at a very fast pace, and the two ladies soon afterwards learned that Lord Alston was closeted with Sir Peregrine. Lord Alston was one of Sir Peregrine's oldest friends. He was a man senior both in age and standing to the baronet; and, moreover, he was a friend who came but seldom to The Cleeve, although his friendship was close and intimate. Nothing was said between Mrs. Orme and Lady Mason, but each dreaded that Lord Alston had come to remonstrate about the marriage. And so in truth he had. The two old men were together for about an hour, and then Lord Alston took his departure without asking for, or seeing any other one of the family. Lord Alston had remonstrated about the marriage, using at last very strong language to dissuade the baronet from a step which he thought so unfortunate; but he had remonstrated altogether in vain. Every word he had used was not only fruitless, but injurious; for Sir Peregrine was a man whom it was very difficult to rescue by opposition, though no man might be more easily led by assumed acquiescence.

‘Orme, my dear fellow,’ said his lordship, towards the end of the interview, ‘it is my duty, as an old friend, to tell you this.’

‘Then, Lord Alston, you have done your duty.’

‘Not while a hope remains that I may prevent this marriage.’

‘There is ground for no such hope on your part; and permit me to say that the expression of such a hope to me is greatly wanting in courtesy.'

'You and I,' continued Lord Alston, without apparent attention to the last words which Sir Peregrine had spoken, 'have nearly come to the end of our tether here. Our careers have been run; and I think I may say as regards both, but I may certainly say as regards you, that they have been so run that we have not disgraced those who preceded us. Our dearest hopes should be that our names may never be held as a reproach by those who come after us.'

'With God's blessing I will do nothing to disgrace my family.'

'But, Orme, you and I cannot act as may those whose names in the world are altogether unnoticed. I know that you are doing this from a feeling of charity to that lady.'

'I am doing it, Lord Alston, because it so pleases me.'

'But your first charity is due to your grandson. Suppose that he was making an offer of his hand to the daughter of some nobleman,—as he is so well entitled to do,—how would it affect his hopes if it were known that you at the time had married a lady whose misfortune made it necessary that she should stand at the bar in a criminal court?'

'Lord Alston,' said Sir Peregrine, rising from his chair, 'I trust that my grandson may never rest his hopes on any woman whose heart could be hardened against him by such a thought as that.'

'But what if she should be guilty?' said Lord Alston.

'Permit me to say,' said Sir Peregrine, still standing, and standing now bolt upright, as though his years did not weigh on him a feather, 'that this conversation has gone far enough. There are some surmises to which I cannot listen, even from Lord Alston.'

Then his lordship shrugged his shoulders, declared that in speaking as he had spoken he had endeavoured to do a friendly duty by an old friend,—certainly the oldest, and almost the dearest friend he had,—and so he took his leave. The wheels of the chariot were heard grating over the gravel, as he was carried away from the door at a gallop, and the two ladies looked into each other's faces, saying nothing. Sir Peregrine was not seen from that time till dinner; but when he did come into the drawing-room his manner to Lady Mason was, if possible, more gracious and more affectionate than ever.

'So Lord Alston was here to-day,' Peregrine said to his mother that night before he went to bed.

'Yes, he was here.'

'It was about this marriage, mother, as sure as I am standing here.'

'I don't think Lord Alston would interfere about that, Perry.'

'Wouldn't he? He would interfere about anything he did not like ; that is, as far as the pluck of it goes. Of course he can't like it. Who can ?

'Perry, your grandfather likes it ; and surely he has a right to please himself.'

'I don't know about that. You might say the same thing if he wanted to kill all the foxes about the place, or do any other outlandish thing. Of course he might kill them, as far as the law goes, but where would he be afterwards ? She hasn't said anything to him, has she ?

'I think not.'

'Nor to you ?'

'No ; she has not spoken to me ; not about that.'

'She promised me positively that she would break it off.'

'You must not be hard on her, Perry.'

Just as these words were spoken, there came a low knock at Mrs. Orme's dressing-room door. This room, in which Mrs. Orme was wont to sit for an hour or so every night before she went to bed, was the scene of all the meetings of affection which took place between the mother and the son. It was a pretty little apartment, opening from Mrs. Orme's bed-room, which had at one time been the exclusive property of Peregrine's father. But by degrees it had altogether assumed feminine attributes ; had been furnished with soft chairs, a sofa, and a lady's table ; and though called by the name of Mrs. Orme's dressing-room, was in fact a separate sitting-room devoted to her exclusive use. Sir Peregrine would not for worlds have entered it without sending up his name beforehand, and this he did on only very rare occasions. But Lady Mason had of late been admitted here, and Mrs. Orme now knew that it was her knock.

'Open the door, Perry,' she said ; 'it is Lady Mason.' He did open the door, and Lady Mason entered.

'Oh, Mr. Orme, I did not know that you were here.'

'I am just off. Good night, mother.'

'But I am disturbing you.'

'No, we had done ;' and he stooped down and kissed his mother. 'Good night, Lady Mason. Hadn't I better put some coals on for you, or the fire will be out ?' He did put on the coals, and then he went his way.

Lady Mason while he was doing this had sat down on the sofa, close to Mrs. Orme ; but when the door was closed Mrs. Orme was the first to speak. 'Well, dear,' she said, putting her hand caressingly on the other's arm. 'I am inclined to think that had there been no one whom Mrs. Orme was bound to consult but herself, she would have wished that this marriage should have gone on. To her it would have been altogether pleasant to have had Lady Mason ever with her in the house ; and she had none of those fears as to future family retrospections respecting which Lord Alston had spoken with so much knowledge of the world. As it was, her manner was so caressing and affectionate to her guest, that she did much more to promote Sir Peregrine's wishes than to oppose them. 'Well, dear,' she said, with her sweetest smile.

'I am so sorry that I have driven your son away.'

'He was going. Besides, it would make no matter; he would stay here all night sometimes, if I didn't drive him away myself. He comes here and writes his letters at the most unconscionable hours, and uses up all my note-paper in telling some horsekeeper what is to be done with his mare.'

'Ah, how happy you must be to have him!'

'Well, I suppose I am,' she said, as a tear came into her eyes. 'We are so hard to please. I am all anxiety now that he should be married; and if he were married, then I suppose I should grumble because I did not see so much of him. He would be more settled if he would marry, I think. For myself I approve of early marriages for young men.' And then she thought of her own husband whom she had loved so well and lost so soon. And so they sat silent for a while, each thinking of her own lot in life.

'But I must not keep you up all night,' said Lady Mason.

'Oh, I do so like you to be here,' said the other. Then again she took hold of her arm, and the two women kissed each other.

'But, Edith,' said the other, 'I came in here to-night with a purpose. I have something that I wish to say to you. Can you listen to me?'

'Oh yes,' said Mrs. Orme; 'surely.'

'Has your son been talking to you about—about what was said between him and me the other day? I am sure he has, for I know he tells you everything,—as he ought to do.'

'Yes, he did speak to me,' said Mrs. Orme, almost trembling with anxiety.

'I am so glad, for now it will be easier for me to tell you. And since that I have seen Mr. Furnival, and he says the same. I tell you because you are so good and so loving to me. I will keep nothing from you; but you must not tell Sir Peregrine that I talked to Mr. Furnival about this.'

Mrs. Orme gave the required promise, hardly thinking at the moment whether or no she would be guilty of any treason against Sir Peregrine in doing so.

'I think I should have said nothing to him, though he is so very old a friend, had not Mr. Orme——'

'You mean Peregrine?'

'Yes; had not he been so—so earnest about it. He told me that if I married Sir Peregrine I should be doing a cruel injury to him—to his grandfather.'

‘He should not have said that.’

‘Yes, Edith,—if he thinks it. He told me that I should be turning all his friends against him. So I promised him that I would speak to Sir Peregrine, and break it off if it be possible.’

‘He told me that.’

‘And then I spoke to Mr. Furnival, and he told me that I should be blamed by all the world if I were to marry him. I cannot tell you all he said, but he said this : that if—if——’

‘If what, dear?’

‘If in the court they should say——’

‘Say what?’

‘Say that I did this thing,—then Sir Peregrine would be crushed, and would die with a broken heart.’

‘But they cannot say that ;—it is impossible. You do not think it possible that they can do so?’ And then again she took hold of Lady Mason’s arm, and looked up anxiously into her face. She looked up anxiously, not suspecting anything, not for a moment presuming it possible that such a verdict could be justly given, but in order that she might see how far the fear of a fate so horrible was operating on her friend. Lady Mason’s face was pale and worn, but not more so than was now customary with her.

‘One cannot say what may be possible,’ she answered slowly. ‘I suppose they would not go on with it if they did not think they had some chance of success.’

‘You mean as to the property?’

‘Yes ; as to the property.’

‘But why should they not try that, if they must try it, without dragging you there?’

‘Ah, I do not understand ; or at least I cannot explain it. Mr. Furnival says that it must be so ; and therefore I shall tell Sir Peregrine to-morrow that all this must be given up.’ And then they sat together silently, holding each other by the hand.

‘Good night, Edith,’ Lady Mason said at last, getting up from her seat.

‘Good night, dearest.’

‘You will let me be your friend still, will you not?’ said Lady Mason.

‘My friend ! Oh yes ; always my friend. Why should this interfere between you and me?’

‘But he will be very angry—at least I fear that he will. Not that—not that he will have anything to regret. But the very strength of his generosity and nobleness will make him angry. He will be indignant because I do not let him make this sacrifice for me. And then—and then—I fear I must leave this house.’

‘Oh no, not that ; I will speak to him. He will do anything for me.’

‘It will be better perhaps that I should go. People will think that I am estranged from Lucius. But if I go, you will come to me? He will let you do that; will he not?’

And then there were warm, close promises given, and embraces interchanged. The women did love each other with a hearty, true love, and each longed that they might be left together. And yet how different they were, and how different had been their lives!

The prominent thought in Lady Mason’s mind as she returned to her own room was this:—that Mrs. Orme had said no word to dissuade her from the line of conduct which she had proposed to herself. Mrs. Orme had never spoken against the marriage as Peregrine had spoken, and Mr. Furnival. Her heart had not been stern enough to allow her to do that. But was it not clear that her opinion was the same as theirs? Lady Mason acknowledged to herself that it was clear, and acknowledged to herself also that no one was in favour of the marriage. ‘I will do it immediately after breakfast,’ she said to herself. And then she sat down,—and sat through the half the night thinking of it.

Mrs. Orme, when she was left alone, almost rebuked herself in that she had said no word of counsel against the undertaking which Lady Mason proposed for herself. For Mr. Furnival and his opinion she did not care much. Indeed, she would have been angry with Lady Mason for speaking to Mr. Furnival on the subject, were it not that her pity was too deep to admit of any anger. That the truth must be established at the trial Mrs. Orme felt all but confident. When alone she would feel quite sure on this point, though a doubt would always creep in on her when Lady Mason was with her. But now, as she sat alone, she could not realize the idea that the fear of a verdict against her friend should offer any valid reason against the marriage. The valid reasons, if there were such, must be looked for elsewhere. And were these other reasons so strong in their validity? Sir Peregrine desired the marriage; and so did Lady Mason herself, as regarded her own individual wishes. Mrs. Orme was sure that this was so. And then for her own self, she—Sir Peregrine’s daughter-in-law, the only lady concerned in the matter—she also would have liked it. But her son disliked it, and she had yielded so far to the wishes of her son. Well; was it not right that with her those wishes should be all but paramount? And thus she endeavoured to satisfy her conscience as she retired to rest.

On the following morning the four assembled at breakfast. Lady Mason hardly spoke at all to any one. Mrs. Orme, who knew what was about to take place, was almost as silent; but Sir Peregrine had almost more to say than usual to his grandson. He was in good spirits, having firmly made up his mind on a certain point; and he showed this by telling Peregrine that he would ride with him immediately after breakfast. 'What has made you so slack about your hunting during the last two or three days?' he asked.

'I shall hunt to-morrow,' said Peregrine.

'Then you can afford time to ride with me through the woods after breakfast.' And so it would have been arranged had not Lady Mason immediately said that she hoped to be able to say a few words to Sir Peregrine in the library after breakfast. 'Place aux dames,' said he. 'Peregrine, the horses can wait.' And so the matter was arranged while they were still sitting over their toast.

Peregrine, as this was said, had looked at his mother, but she had not ventured to take her eyes for a moment from the teapot. Then he had looked at Lady Mason, and saw that she was, as it were, going through a fashion of eating her breakfast. In order to break the absolute silence of the room he muttered something about the weather, and then his grandfather, with the same object, answered him. After that no words were spoken till Sir Peregrine, rising from his chair, declared that he was ready.

He got up and opened the door for his guest, and then hurrying across the hall, opened the library door for her also, holding it till she had passed in. Then he took her left hand in his, and passing his right arm round her waist, asked her if anything disturbed her.

'Oh yes,' she said, 'yes; there is much that disturbs me. I have done very wrong.'

'How done wrong, Mary?' She could not recollect that he had called her Mary before, and the sound she thought was very sweet;—was very sweet, although she was over forty, and he over seventy years of age.

'I have done very wrong, and I have now come here that I may undo it. Dear Sir Peregrine, you must not be angry with me.'

'I do not think that I shall be angry with you; but what is it, dearest?'

But she did not know how to find words to declare her purpose. It was comparatively an easy task to tell Mrs. Orme that she had made up her mind not to marry Sir Peregrine, but it was by no means easy to tell the baronet himself. And now she stood there leaning over the fireplace, with his arm round her waist,—as it behoved her to stand no longer, seeing the resolution to which she had come. But still she did not speak.

'Well, Mary, what is it? I know there is something on your mind or you would not have summoned me in here. Is it about the trial? Have you seen Mr. Furnival again?'

'No; it is not about the trial,' she said, avoiding the other question.

'What is it then?'

'Sir Peregrine, it is impossible that we should be married.' And thus she brought forth her tidings, as it were at a gasp, speaking at the moment with a voice that was almost indicative of anger.

'And why not?' said he, releasing her from his arm and looking at her.

'It cannot be,' she said.

'And why not, Lady Mason?'

'It cannot be,' she said again, speaking with more emphasis, and with a stronger tone.

'And is that all that you intend to tell me? Have I done anything that has offended you?'

'Offended me! No. I do not think that would be possible. The offence is on the other side——'

'Then, my dear,——'

'But listen to me now. It cannot be. I know that it is wrong. Everything tells me that such a marriage on your part would be a sacrifice,—a terrible sacrifice. You would be throwing away your great rank——'

'No,' shouted Sir Peregrine; 'not though I married a kitchen-maid,—instead of a lady who in social life is my equal.'

'Ah, no; I should not have said rank. You cannot lose that;—but your station in the world, the respect of all around you, the—the——'

'Who has been telling you all this?'

'I have wanted no one to tell me. Thinking of it has told it me all. My own heart which is full of gratitude and love for you has told me.'

'You have not seen Lord Alston?'

'Lord Alston! oh, no.'

'Has Peregrine been speaking to you?'

'Peregrine!'

'Yes; Peregrine; my grandson?'

'He has spoken to me.'

'Telling you to say this to me. Then he is an ungrateful boy;—a very ungrateful boy. I would have done anything to guard him from wrong in this matter.'

'Ah; now I see the evil that I have done. Why did I ever come into the house to make quarrels between you?'

'There shall be no quarrel. I will forgive him even that if you will be guided by me. And, dearest Mary, you must be guided by me now. This matter has gone too far for you to go back—unless, indeed, you will say that personally you have an aversion to the marriage.'

'Oh, no; no; it is not that,' she said eagerly. She could not help saying it with eagerness. She could not inflict the wound on his feelings which her silence would then have given.

‘Under those circumstances, I have a right to say that the marriage must go on.’

‘No ; no.’

‘But I say it must. Sit down, Mary.’ And she did sit down, while he stood leaning over her and thus spoke. ‘You speak of sacrificing me. I am an old man with not many more years before me. If I did sacrifice what little is left to me of life with the object of befriending one whom I really love, there would be no more in it than what a man might do, and still feel that the balance was on the right side. But here there will be no sacrifice. My life will be happier, and so will Edith’s. And so indeed will that boy’s, if he did but know it. For the world’s talk, which will last some month or two, I care nothing. This I will confess, that if I were prompted to this only by my own inclination, only by love for you——’ and as he spoke he held out his hand to her, and she could not refuse him hers—‘in such a case I should doubt and hesitate and probably keep aloof from such a step. But it is not so. In doing this I shall gratify my own heart, and also serve you in your great troubles. Believe me, I have thought of that.’

‘I know you have, Sir Peregrine,—and therefore it cannot be.’

‘But therefore it shall be. The world knows it now ; and were we to be separated after what has past, the world would say that I—I had thought you guilty of this crime.’

‘I must bear all that.’ And now she stood before him, not looking him in the face, but with her face turned down towards the ground, and speaking hardly above her breath.

‘By heavens, no ; not whilst I can stand by your side. Not whilst I have strength left to support you and thrust the lie down the throat of such a wretch as Joseph Mason. No, Mary, go back to Edith and tell her that you have tried it, but that there is no escape for you.’ And then he smiled at her. His smile at times could be very pleasant !

But she did not smile as she answered him. ‘Sir Peregrine,’ she said ; and she endeavoured to raise her face to his but failed.

‘Well, my love.’

‘Sir Peregrine, I am guilty.’

‘Guilty ! Guilty of what ?’ he said, startled rather than instructed by her words.

‘Guilty of all this with which they charge me.’ And then she threw herself at his feet, and wound her arms round his knees.

IMPORTANT FAMILY MEDICINE.

CAMOMILE PILLS,

THE

MOST CERTAIN PRESERVER OF HEALTH,

A MILD, YET SPEEDY, SAFE, AND

EFFECTUAL AID IN CASES OF INDIGESTION,

AND ALL STOMACH COMPLAINTS,

AND, AS A NATURAL CONSEQUENCE,

A PURIFIER OF THE BLOOD, AND A SWEETENER OF THE WHOLE SYSTEM.

INDIGESTION is a weakness or want of power of the digestive juices in the stomach to convert what we eat and drink into healthy matter, for the proper nourishment of the whole system. It is caused by everything which weakens the system in general, or the stomach in particular. From it proceed nearly all the diseases to which we are liable; for it is very certain, that if we could always keep the stomach right we should only die by old age or accident. Indigestion produces a great variety of unpleasant sensations: amongst the most prominent of its miserable effects are a want of, or an inordinate appetite, sometimes attended with a constant craving for drink, a distension or feeling of enlargement of the stomach, flatulency, heartburn, pains in the stomach, acidity, unpleasant taste in the mouth, perhaps sickness, rumbling noise in the bowels: in some cases of depraved digestion there is nearly a complete disrelish for food, but still the appetite is not greatly impaired, as at the stated period of meals persons so afflicted can eat heartily, although without much gratification; a long train of nervous symptoms are also frequent attendants, general debility, great languidness, and incapacity for exertion. The minds of persons so afflicted frequently become irritable and desponding, and great anxiety is observable in the countenance; they appear thoughtful, melancholy, and dejected, under great apprehension of some imaginary danger, will start at any unexpected noise or occurrence, and become so agitated that they require some time to calm and collect themselves; yet for all this the mind is exhilarated without much difficulty; pleasing events, society, will for a time dissipate all appearance of disease; but the excitement produced by an agreeable change vanishes soon after the cause has gone by. Other symptoms are, violent palpitations, restlessness, the sleep disturbed by frightful dreams and startings, and affording little or no refreshment; occasionally there is much moaning, with a sense of weight and oppression upon the chest, nightmare, &c.

It is almost impossible to enumerate all the symptoms of this first invader upon the constitution, as in a hundred cases of Indigestion there will probably be something peculiar to each; but, be they what they may, they are all occasioned by the food becoming a burden rather than a support to the stomach; and in all its stages the medicine most wanted is that which will afford speedy and effectual assistance to the digestive organs, and give energy to the nervous and muscular systems,—nothing can more speedily or with more certainty effect so desirable an object than Norton's Extract of Camomile Flowers. The herb has from time immemorial been highly esteemed in England as a grateful anodyne, imparting an aromatic bitter to the taste, and a pleasing degree of warmth and strength to the stomach; and in all cases of indigestion, gout in the stomach, windy colic, and general weakness, it has for ages been strongly recommended by the most eminent practitioners as very useful and beneficial. The great, indeed only, objection to its use has been the large quantity of water which it takes to dissolve a small part of the flowers, and which must be taken with it into the stomach. It requires a quarter of a pint of boiling water to dissolve the soluble portion of one drachm of Camomile Flowers; and, when one or even two ounces may be taken with advantage, it must at once be seen how impossible it is to take a proper dose of this wholesome herb in the form of tea; and the only reason why it has not long since been placed the very first in rank of all restorative medicines is, that in taking it the stomach has always been loaded with water, which tends in a great measure to counteract, and very frequently wholly to destroy the effect. It must be evident that loading a weak stomach with a large quantity of water, merely for the purpose of conveying into it a small quantity of medicine must be injurious; and that the medicine must possess powerful renovating properties only to counteract the bad effects likely to be produced by the water. Generally speaking, this has been the case with Camomile Flowers, a herb possessing the highest restorative qualities, and when properly taken, decidedly the most speedy restorer, and the most certain preserver of health.

These PILLS are wholly CAMOMILE, prepared by a peculiar process, accidentally discovered, and known only to the proprietor, and which he firmly believes to be one of the most valuable modern discoveries in medicine, by which all the essential and extractive matter of more than an ounce of the flowers is concentrated in four moderate sized pills. Experience has afforded the most ample proof that they possess all the fine aromatic and stomachic properties for which the herb has been esteemed; and, as they are taken into the stomach unencumbered by any diluting or indigestible substance, in the same degree has their benefit been more immediate and decided. Mild in their operation and pleasant in their effect, they may be taken at any age, and under any circumstance, without danger or inconvenience. A person exposed to cold and wet a whole day or night could not possibly receive any injury from taking them, but on the contrary, they would effectually prevent a cold being taken. After a long acquaintance with and strict observance of the medicinal properties of Norton's Camomile Pills, it is only doing them justice to say, that they are really the most valuable of all TONIC MEDICINES. By the word tonic is meant a medicine which gives strength to the stomach sufficient to digest in proper quantities all wholesome food, which increases the power of every nerve and muscle of the human body, or, in other words invigorates the nervous and muscular systems. The solidity or firmness of the whole tissue of the body, which so quickly follows the use of Norton's Camomile Pills, their certain and speedy effects in repairing the partial dilapidations from time or intemperance, and their lasting salutary influence on the whole frame, is most convincing, that in the smallest compass is contained the largest quantity of the tonic principle, of so peculiar a nature as to pervade the whole system, through which it diffuses health and strength sufficient to resist the formation of disease, and also to fortify the constitution against contagion; as such, their general use is strongly recommended as a preventative during the prevalence of malignant fever or other infectious diseases, and to persons attending sick rooms they are invaluable, as in no one instance have they ever failed in preventing the taking of illness, even under the most trying circumstances.

As Norton's Camomile Pills are particularly recommended for all stomach complaints or indigestion, it will probably be expected that some advice should be given respecting diet, though after all that has been written upon the subject, after the publication of volume upon volume, after the country has, at it were, been inundated with practical essays on diet, as a means of prolonging life, it would be unnecessary to say more, did we not feel it our duty to make the humble endeavour of inducing the public to regard them not, but to adopt that course which is dictated by nature, by reason, and by common sense. Those persons who study the wholesomes, and are governed by the opinion of writers on diet, are uniformly both unhealthy in body and weak in mind. There can be no doubt that the palate is designed to inform us what is proper for the stomach, and of course that must best instruct us what food to take and what to avoid: we want no other adviser. Nothing can be more clear than that those articles which are agreeable to the taste were by nature intended for our food and sustenance, whether liquid or solid, foreign or of native production; if they are pure and unadulterated, no harm need be dreaded by their use; they will only injure by abuse. Consequently, whatever the palate approves, eat and drink always in moderation but never in excess; keeping in mind that the first process of digestion is performed in the mouth, the second in the stomach; and that, in order that the stomach may be able to do its work properly, it is requisite the first process should be well performed; this consists in masticating or chewing the solid food, so as to break down and separate the fibres and small substances of meat and vegetables, mixing them well, and blending the whole together before they are swallowed; and it is particularly urged upon all to take plenty of time to their meals and never eat in haste. If you conform to this short and simple, but comprehensive advice, and find that there are various things which others eat and drink with pleasure and without inconvenience, and which would be pleasant to yourself only that they disagree, you may at once conclude that the fault is in the stomach, that it does not possess the power which it ought to do, that it wants assistance, and the sooner that assistance is afforded the better. A very short trial of this medicine will best prove how soon it will put the stomach in a condition to perform with ease all the work which nature intended for it. By its use you will soon be able to enjoy, in moderation, whatever is agreeable to the taste, and unable to name one individual article of food which disagrees with or sits unpleasantly on the stomach. Never forget that a small meal well digested affords more nourishment to the system than a large one, even of the same food, when digested imperfectly. Let the dish be ever so delicious, ever so enticing a variety offered, the bottle ever so enchanting, never forget that temperance tends to preserve health, and that health is the soul of enjoyment. But should an impropriety be at any time, or ever so often committed, by which the stomach becomes overloaded or disordered, render it immediate aid by taking a dose of Norton's

Camomile Pills, which will so promptly assist in carrying off the burden thus imposed upon it that all will soon be right again.

It is most certainly true that every person in his lifetime consumes a quantity of noxious matter, which if taken at one meal would be fatal; it is these small quantities of noxious matter, which are introduced into our food, either by accident or wilful adulteration, which we find so often upset the stomach, and not unfrequently lay the foundation of illness, and perhaps final ruination to health. To preserve the constitution, it should be our constant care, if possible, to counteract the effect of these small quantities of unwholesome matter; and whenever, in that way, an enemy to the constitution finds its way into the stomach, a friend should be immediately sent after it, which would prevent its mischievous effects, and expel it altogether; no better friend can be found, nor one which will perform the task with greater certainty than NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS. And let it be observed that the longer this medicine is taken the less it will be wanted; it can in no case become habitual, as its entire action is to give energy and force to the stomach, which is the spring of life, the source from which the whole frame draws its succour and support. After an excess of eating or drinking, and upon every occasion of the general health being at all disturbed, these PILLS should be immediately taken, as they will stop and eradicate disease at its commencement. Indeed, it is most confidently asserted, that by the timely use of this medicine only, and a common degree of caution, any person may enjoy all the comforts within his reach, may pass through life without an illness, and with the certainty of attaining a healthy OLD AGE.

On account of their volatile properties, they must be kept in bottles; and if closely corked their qualities are neither impaired by time nor injured by any change of climate whatever. Price 13½d. and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions. The large bottle contains the quantity of three small ones, or PILLS equal to fourteen ounces of CAMOMILE FLOWERS.

Sold by nearly all respectable Medicine Vendors.

Be particular to ask for "NORTON'S PILLS," and do not be persuaded to purchase an imitation.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION!!!

GODFREY'S

EXTRACT OF ELDER FLOWER

Is strongly recommended for Softening, Improving, Beautifying and Preserving the SKIN, and giving it a blooming and charming appearance. It will completely remove Tan, Sunburn, Redness, &c., and by its Balsamic and Healing qualities render the skin soft, pliable, and free from dryness, &c., clear it from every humour, pimple, or eruption; and by continuing its use only a short time, the skin will become and continue soft and smooth, and the complexion perfectly clear and beautiful.

Sold in Bottles, price 2s. 9d., by all Medicine Vendors and Perfumers.

FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM AND RHEUMATIC GOUT.

SIMCO'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

are a certain and safe remedy. They restore tranquillity to the nerves, give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system. No other medicine can be compared to the excellent Pills, as they prevent the disorder from attacking the stomach or head, and have restored thousands from pain and misery to health and comfort.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, at 1s. 1½d. or 2s. 9d. per box.

INFLUENZA, COUGHS, AND COLDS.

SIMCO'S ESSENCE OF LINSEED

is the most efficacious remedy ever discovered for the relief of persons suffering from Influenza; the first two doses generally arrest the progress of this distressing complaint and a little perseverance completely removes it. Children's Coughs, as well as recent ones in Adults, will be removed by a few doses (frequently by the first); and Asthmatic persons, who previously had not been able to lie down in bed, have received the utmost benefit from the use of

SIMCO'S ESSENCE OF LINSEED.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

CROWNED WITH SUCCESS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD!

DIPLOMA AWARDED TO THORLEY'S FOOD BY THE PENNSYLVANIA STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY IN 1859.

DIPLOMA AWARDED TO THORLEY'S CONDIMENT BY THE JERSEY STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY IN 1860.

SILVER MEDAL AWARDED BY THE KEIGHLEY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

8 PRIZES were awarded to Cattle fed on food seasoned with THORLEY'S CONDIMENT, in DECEMBER, 1860.

29 PRIZES were awarded to Cattle fed on food seasoned with THORLEY'S CONDIMENT, in the Months of JULY, AUGUST, SEPTEMBER, OCTOBER, and NOVEMBER, 1861.

THORLEY'S FOOD FOR CATTLE.

Important to every man who keeps

In making purchases of THORLEY'S CONDIMENT, the public are respectfully requested notice that the Date of Manufacture is Branded on each Cask or Case.

REDUCED PRICES.

	£	s.	d.
Cask, containing 448 feeds (loose), with measure, weighing net 1 cwt.	2	0	0
Cask, containing 224 feeds (loose), with measure, weighing net $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt.	1	0	0
Cask, containing 112 feeds (loose), with measure, weighing net $\frac{1}{4}$ cwt.	0	10	0

Each Measure has Joseph Thorley's Signature burnt thereon.

Case, containing 448 packets, each packet 1 feed, weighing net 1 cwt.	2	5	0
Case, containing 224 packets, each packet 1 feed, weighing net $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt.	1	2	6
Case, containing 112 packets, each packet 1 feed, weighing net $\frac{1}{4}$ cwt.	0	11	3

Each Packet has Joseph Thorley's Signature engraved thereon.

The above-mentioned small quantities may be had of Agents, or at the Retail Depot, Newgate-street, City, but nothing less than a 45s. Case or 40s. Cask can be sent direct, Carriage Paid, to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom, from my Manufactory. Each order must be accompanied with a remittance made payable to JOSEPH THORLEY, Newgate-street, E.C.

ADDRESS—STEAM MILLS AND MANUFACTORY, CALEDONIAN ROAD, KING'S CROSS, LONDON.

For the fattening of pigs it is impossible to overrate the importance of this Condiment. The most eminent feeders and breeders use it now constantly, and the marked difference which it makes in the animal is sufficiently evidenced by the

E
Is in ch bu
re
it its so be
So

are stor exc rest

is tl
Infl
and ones pers
bene

Try one ton of THORLEY'S NEW FEEDING MEAL, composed of the finest Locust Beans, Indian Corn, Linseed, &c., well seasoned with Thorley's Condiment. Price £16 per Ton. Horse-keepers are respectfully invited to give this compound a fair trial, mixed with damp chaff and nothing else, and notice the saving in keep, with an improved working condition. See Dr. Brown's report, and trials made by some of our first Carmen in town and

THIS CONDIMENT WAS INVENTED BY JOSEPH THORLEY
IMPROVED UPON BY JOSEPH THORLEY!!
AND SOLELY MANUFACTURED BY JOSEPH THORLEY

fact that pigs fed on it have taken the principal prizes at the various agricultural shows. W. B. Wainman, Esq., of Carhead Farm, Cross Hills, Yorkshire, in the year (1861) alone taken 62 first and 28 second prizes and 2 silver medals. Mr. Stearn, the noted feeder on food seasoned with Thorley's Condiment. Mr. Stearn, the noted feeder of Wiekham Market, uses it extensively, and with such effect that his pigs have a world-wide reputation. So with the Messrs. Booth, of Killerby, and others whose names could be mentioned. At the Leeds Show of the Royal Agricultural Society, Samuel Woodhouse, Esq., of Norley Hall, Frodsham, took a first prize with a pig which, as soon as it had Thorley's Condiment to it, increased in weight by 30lb. per week.

The use of Condimental compounds in seasoning food for cattle has been recommended by the most intelligent agriculturists of the past and present centuries. John Sinclair recommended its use upwards of fifty years ago. Professor Daubney, M.D., F.R.S., has recommended it in his lectures before the University of Oxford. And it is a singular fact that there is scarcely a veterinary practitioner that does not contain Condimental compounds to a greater or less extent. It is clearly proving that, when judiciously intermixed with the ordinary food, they must produce the most beneficial results. In speaking of some of the aromatic spices used in Condimental compounds, Sir John Sinclair observes, "It is a great use when used alone, but not nearly so much so as when mixed with chaff taken along with it." THORLEY'S CONDIMENT is compounded of the most nutritive substances known, intimately mixed with the choicest aromatics and saline ingredients in well-ascertained proportions. It is a well-known fact, in short, it is laid down as an axiom amongst medical men, that persons who take coffee are never attacked with pleurisy, the aroma of the coffee being a preventative. The analogy between pleurisy in the human frame and the rot in sheep is by no means remote; and that is one reason why sheep fed with Thorley's compound never have the rot. Horses, Cattle, Sheep, and Poultry, all thrive and do well upon it. By its use ENTIRELY rendered more healthy and vigorous, and their stock stronger and sturdier when taken from the road for the winter, they are neither liable to take the affliction with disease. NEAT CATTLE fatten kindly upon it, give a larger quantity of richer milk, and have never been known to suffer from puerperal fever at calving, where it has been judiciously used; gruel made with it is the most invigorating caudle. SHEEP thrive upon it in a most surprising manner, and, as before observed, the rot is unknown where they get a portion of it with their food; it is found to improve both flesh and fleece alike in all well as quality. Upon PIGS, its effects may be judged by the foreign prizes; and for boars it is invaluable. Mr. Graham, of Leeds (a prize breeder) observes, "I have attended thirteen shows, and taken twelve prizes with small-bred boars. I have now commenced working him, and he is still more valuable. I have fixed his price at 10s. 6d., and he is worth it." Sows it is still more valuable. Mr. W. B. Wainman has a sow, who, after travelling hundreds of miles by sea and land to agricultural shows, has put to the boar, has a farrow of thirteen pigs, all well and hearty, and plenty of nourishment for the whole. Mixed with their usual food, they are found to lay more eggs, and are not nearly so liable to disease. DOGS, rendered more muscular, and possess greater powers of endurance. For all kinds of Stock, it stands unrivalled. It improves and renders more nutritious the commonest food; it stimulates and strengthens the system of no animal taking it has ever been known to be off its feed. In one shilling it is the cattle feeding fact of the age!

Respectable Agents required for Towns in which none are yet. For terms apply, Newgate-street, London.

SIMCO'S ESSENCE OF LINSEED.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

THIS CONDIMENT WAS INVENTED BY JOSEPH THORLEY!
 IMPROVED UPON BY JOSEPH THORLEY!!
 AND SOLELY MANUFACTURED BY JOSEPH THORLEY!!!
 IT CONVERTS THE COMMONEST OF HAY & STRAW
 INTO A SUPERIOR PROVENDER!

HOW TO KEEP A HORSE
 FOR 1s. 6d. PER DAY, OR 10s. 6d. PER WEEK.

WITH A BRIGHT EYE, SLEEK COAT, AND IN SPLENDID WORKING CONDITION.
 7 lbs. of THORLEY'S FEEDING MEAL, £16 per Ton s. d.
 which is 2s. per Stone 1 0
 10 lbs. of Chopped Hay and 7 lbs. of Chopped Straw 0 6

[The Chaff must be damped with water, and then well mixed together, when it may be divided into 4 feeds for the day.]

Per Day 1 6
 Multiply by seven 7

For a Week 10 6

The above compound is composed of the finest Locust Beans, Indian Corn, Linseed, &c., well seasoned with Thorley's Celebrated Condiment.

Dr. ALFRED BROWN, WANDSWORTH, writing to the Editor of "Thorley's Agricultural Gleaner," says: "Permit me through your columns to say that I am very much pleased with Thorley's Feeding Meal, supplied in casks of 1½ cwt. at 30s. the cask. I have used it as a substitute for corn for my horses with the best possible results. Consisting, as it does, of numerous cereals and lentils, finely ground together, it is much more nutritious and more readily assimilated than oats, and being given in a damp state, is calculated to prevent the occurrence of broken wind in horses, especially nags used for fast work. I strongly recommend it for general use, as I am convinced, after considerable experience in feeding horses, that your food is far more economical, and in every respect more wholesome for cattle than any other kind of corn or cattle food now in use."

Free to any part of London by my own waggons, at £16 per Ton, net cash, barrels included. Parcels of 5 Tons and upwards will be charged at the rate of £15 per Ton. Cheques and Post-office Orders must be made payable to the Inventor, JOSEPH THORLEY, Steam Mills, Caledonian-road, King's-cross.

N.B.—Single Barrels for trial, containing 12 Stones, Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in the Kingdom on receipt of 30s.

THORLEY'S AGRICULTURAL GLEANER,

PUBLISHED EVERY MONDAY AFTERNOON IN TIME FOR POST,
 PRICE ONE PENNY,

STAMPED FREE BY POST TWOPENCE.

THE AGRICULTURAL GLEANER includes eight pages of original and carefully selected matter, containing the latest information connected with farming operations and agricultural improvements; the latest London and Provincial Markets; full and authentic reports of Fat Cattle Shows and general Agricultural Meetings; with the most recent Local and Foreign News up to the time of publication.

THORLEY'S AGRICULTURAL GLEANER has now been established twelve months. It was started with a view to meet the growing requirements of the age—the demand for cheap information. Anticipating the repeal of the paper duty, the proprietor determined to give his subscribers and readers the full benefit of the boon, even in anticipation, by publishing a journal of agricultural and general events, which, in point of talent and circulation, should not be surpassed. That he has succeeded, the fact that the circulation of the GLEANER exceeds that of the whole of the other agricultural papers put together, will prove, while the character of this circulation is such as to secure for advertisers the greatest benefits that can be obtained from their announcements.

ADVERTISEMENTS, SIXPENCE PER LINE; a Series of Thirteen Insertions, Threepence per Line.

NEWGATE STREET, CITY. ADDRESS—THORLEY'S STEAM PRINTING WORKS, CALEDONIAN ROAD, KING'S CROSS.

Published every Monday in time for Post. PRICE ONE PENNY.

country. A Sample Barrel, containing 12 Stones, Carriage Paid to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom (barrels included) for 30s. 14 Barrels, weighing nett 21 cwt., at 15s., delivered Free to Rail in London (barrels free), £16 16s. JOSEPH THORLEY, STEAM MILLS, CALEDONIAN-ROAD, KING'S-CROSS, LONDON.

THORLEY'S ILLUSTRATED FARMERS' ALMANACK for 1862,

8vo., 160 Pages. Now Ready.

PRICE FOURPENCE; POST FREE FOR SIX STAMPS

CONTENTS:—Address. Assessed Taxes, &c. Agricultural Societies. Description and full page Engraving of Buck Merrilegs. Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes. Sir John Sinclair on the use of Seasoning or Condiments with which the various sorts of Food are accompanied. Calendar (with illustration) Monthly. Crown Law Officers. The Cabinet. The Cottage Garden; with Directions for every Month in the Year. Synoptical Index to the Breeds of Neat Cattle,—Wild Race; Devonshire; Dutch or Short-horned; Lancashire or Long-horn; Galloway or Polled; Suffolk Dun (illustrated); Ayrshire Breed (illustrated); Highland Breed; Lowland Breed; Alderney; Welsh Breed; Improved Kerry Breed. The Derby of 1862,—A Critical Glance at the Doings of the “Cracks” of the Derby of 1862, with the Winner distinctly Predicted by “Predictor” Horse—Alvediston, Alchemist, Ace of Clubs, Ballerino, Buckstone, Beverley, Caterer, The Knave, Lord Burleigh, The Marquis, Master Fenton, Neptunus, Old Calebar, Wingrave, Zetland. Philosophy of Draining. Epitome of the Prizes awarded at the Royal Agricultural Show at Leeds, 1861; Summary of ditto. Monthly Farming Notes; Varieties of Fowls,—Spanish (illustrated); Bantam (illustrated); Siberian (illustrated); Malay (illustrated); Game (illustrated); Dorking; Feeding of ditto. The Farrier and the Whipper-in. Fairs in England and Wales; Corrections of ditto. Ditto. Analysis of Guano. Her Majesty's Household. Prince Consort's ditto. Prince of Wales' ditto. The Horse,—Race Horse; Hunters, Saddle Horses, &c. (illustrated); Cart or Draught Horses (illustrated). Law Terms. Monarchs of England, from the Conquest. Artificial Manures; the Super-phosphate Theory. Poultry and the Poultry House. Prizes taken at the Royal Agricultural Show at Leeds by Animals fed upon Food Seasoned with Thorley's Condiment. Poetry,—“Signs of Prosperity;” “The Voice of Labour;” “I'm of the Band that Till the Land.” Quarter Sessions in England and Wales. Royal Family. Reigning Sovereigns. Refreshment Houses and Wine Licenses. Secretaries of State. Stamp Duty on Transfer of Stock. Synoptical Index to the Breeds of Sheep,—Without Horns (illustrated); Horned (illustrated). Shelter for Stock. Synoptical Index to the Principal Breeds of Swine in Great Britain. Sleep of Plants. Transfer on Dividends of the Public Funds. Tenant Right. University Terms. Year's Quarter, &c., &c.

ORDER OF ANY BOOKSELLER. NEWGATE STREET, CITY.

PRIZES TO BE AWARDED IN 1862

TO CATTLE FED ON FOOD SEASONED WITH

THORLEY'S CONDIMENT.

—:O:—

TWENTY SILVER CUPS, VALUE TEN POUNDS EACH;

Total, — TWO HUNDRED POUNDS !!!

The Cups will be of Solid Silver, and weigh 16 oz. each. They are now being manufactured by Messrs. ELKINGTON & Co., of Regent-street, whose name is a guarantee for the beauty of design and the excellence of the workmanship.

Secretaries of the different Agricultural Societies must apply to JOSEPH THORLEY, the Inventor and Sole Manufacturer of THORLEY'S FOOD FOR CATTLE, Steam Mills, CALEDONIAN-ROAD, KING'S-CROSS, LONDON.

Ten of the Cups are designed as Prizes for the BEST BEASTS, and the other Ten for PIGS.

SIMCO'S ESSENCE OF LINSEED.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

LONDON SOCIETY:

AN ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY MAGAZINE

OF

LIGHT AND AMUSING LITERATURE,

FOR

THE HOURS OF RELAXATION.

CONTAINING

SELECT TALES; BIOGRAPHY & ANECDOTE OF SOCIAL CELEBRITIES; TABLE TALK; OBSERVATIONS OF LIFE AND MANNERS; REMINISCENCES OF DISTINGUISHED
LEADERS OF SOCIETY; THE ROMANCE OF LONDON LOCALITIES; LEAVES
FROM THE HISTORY OF OLD ENGLISH FAMILIES; ORIGINAL
CONTRIBUTIONS TO SOCIAL AMUSEMENT; POPULAR STUDIES—
LITERARY, CRITICAL, ARTISTIC, AND SCIENTIFIC; HOLIDAY
NOTES AND INCIDENTS OF TRAVEL; QUESTIONS OF DOMESTIC INTEREST AND TOPICS OF THE DAY.

THIS new Magazine will offer a variety of matter and illustration fitted for mental recreation and quiet enjoyment. It will be a book for leisure moments and their changeful moods, sometimes suggesting salutary thought, sometimes provoking a smile and a lighter vein—blending, if possible, the racy vigour of originality and the sparkle of a clear, nervous style.

Vivid Sketches by Author and Artist, Spirited Discussions, and Lively Narratives, under due restraint of taste and temper, will be combined to produce a readable and popular periodical—diversified in its contents, and marked by freshness.

Neither governed nor swayed by any clique—free from the incumbrance of a forced “mission,” or the dead-weight of a hazy generality, this Miscellany comes forward to occupy open, broad, and well-marked ground.

“LONDON SOCIETY” will sustain its title—reflecting, as in a mirror and arresting as in a picture, glimpses of the brilliant Panorama of Modern Society, caught from various points of view. In addition to the usual elements of an agreeable, well-conducted Magazine, supported by able Writers and Artists, it will deal in

No. I. on February 1.

LONDON SOCIETY.

a special and genial manner with the Phenomena, Humours, and Curiosities of Society in Town and Country.

That combination of elegance and energy which is at once the grace and glory of our English Life at all its greater centres,—those characteristics which form the distinguishing attractions of Society in the Capital and lend to it a peculiar fascination, will be portrayed in this Magazine by pen and pencil. It will seek to trace the subtle, powerful influence exercised in the assemblies of cultivated men and refined women; to exhibit the action and reaction of thoughtful intelligence and ambitious effort; to estimate the force and define the direction of the Spirit of Society.

While essentially cheerful in tone and even gay, as best becomes its chief purpose, "LONDON SOCIETY" will draw no veil over the sterner features of that many-sided life which it essays to paint. A pleasant companion may be at the same time a true friend, and an earnest hint does not act less forcibly when it comes with a smile and not with a frown.

Although presenting hard realities, as well as gentler traits, it will yet be the chief aim, because good is contagious as well as evil, to search out and linger over the sunnier aspects of life—to dwell on its benign influences and refreshing hours—its higher aspirations and nobler endeavours. By such means the new organ will try to depict, move, and interest the

RANK, WEALTH, WIT, AND BEAUTY
which constitute the World of "LONDON SOCIETY."

Published Monthly, price One Shilling.

The First Number will appear on February 1, 1862.

. All Literary and Artistic Communications should be addressed to the Editor, accompanied by envelopes for their return, if necessary.

OFFICE: 49, FLEET STREET, E.C.,

AND SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

LONDON SOCIETY.

Amongst other Tales, Sketches, and Illustrations, the following will appear in Early Numbers:—

SAILING WITH THE STREAM. A Tale of Character and Society.

Modern Chivalry.

THE ARTIST IN THE LONDON STREETS—FAIR FACES IN THE CROWD.

Gossip about Luck in Families.

Club-Life and Club-Men.

A ROMANCE OF THE PEERAGE.

Table-Talk—Letter-Writers and Diary-Keepers.

BALL-ROOM SKETCHES—The Silent Lover.

Brighton Belles.

The Art of Extinguishing Bores.

What befel a Certain Family in Park Lane.

The Anatomy of Discontent.

Housekeeping in Belgravia.

Hints on the Harmony of Colour in a Lady's Dress.

SOCIAL BYPLAY—A Quiet Rubber.

A Wife and a Fortune:—How I gained the one and fell into the other.

THE MERCHANT PRINCES OF OLD LONDON—

A Series of Sketches, Biographical and Anecdotal, of the Men who laid the Foundations of English Commerce, with Pictures of the Times in which they lived.

THE ROMANCE OF ENDEAVOUR—A Series of Occasional Papers, dealing chiefly with the Career of those Pioneers who led the way in Great Social Movements; of those who have identified themselves with Great Branches of Industry and the Rise of Localities now famous; or of those who, in some decisive manner, helped to improve our Social Condition and develop the Resources of the Empire.

No. I. on February 1.

LONDON SOCIETY.

Amongst other Tales, Sketches, and Illustrations, the following will appear in Early Numbers:—

THE BELLES OF THE LONDON SEASON.

Is it Friendship? Is it Love?

LONDON SCENES—A Stroll in the Park.

The Story of an English Mansion.

Britons going to Business.

PATERFAMILIAS IN PUBLIC AND PRIVATE.

No. I.—Paterfamilias Reading “The Times.”

Social Veneering.

The Dazzled Bachelor.

Æsop in Piccadilly.

PICTURES OF SOCIETY FROM OUR ENGLISH CLASSICS.

Happy Influences.

Half-Hours with Quiet Men.

What Can be Done in a Day.

THE DRAWING-ROOM AND THE CONSERVATORY—their Ornaments and Accessories.

EVENING AMUSEMENTS.

Gay Moments.

SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY—Tenez bonne table et soignez les femmes.

CURIOSITIES OF MONEymaking—

I.—The Money Itself.

II.—The People who Help to take care of it.

III.—The People who Speculate upon it.

IV.—The People who Enjoy it.

V.—Science and Skill Earning Money,

VI.—The Art of Inducing People to Spend it.

VII.—The Methods of Holding it Fast.

No. I. on February 1.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES,

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria,
Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms, Colic,
Renal and Uterine Diseases,

ARE IMMEDIATELY RELIEVED BY A DOSE OF

CHLORODYNE,

(Trade Mark.)

DISCOVERED AND NAMED BY

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE, M.R.C.S.L.,

Ex-Army Medical Staff.

The question asked by invalids, families, and households is—What is the best medicine to give in the above diseases, and what to have always ready? Medical testimony, the reply of thousands of sufferers and invalids, is confirmatory of the invaluable relief afforded by this remedy above all others.

CHLORODYNE is a liquid taken in drops according to age. It invariably relieves pain of whatever kind; creates a calm refreshing sleep; allays irritation of the nervous system when all other remedies fail; leaving no bad effects like opium or laudanum, and can be taken when none other can be tolerated. Its value in saving life in infancy is not easily estimated; a few drops will subdue the irritation of Teething, prevent and arrest Convulsions, cure Whooping Cough, Spasms, and Flatus at once.

Among Invalids it allays the pain of Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, &c. It soothes the weary aching of Consumption, relieves the Soreness of the Chest, Cough, and Expectoration; and cures all Chest Affections, such as Asthma, Bronchitis, Palpitation, &c. It checks Diarrhoea, Alvine Discharges, or Spasms and Colics of the Intestines, &c.

The extensive demand for this remedy, known as DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, by the Medical Profession, Hospitals, Dispensaries—Civil, Military, and Naval—and Families especially, guarantees that this statement of its extreme importance and value is a bona fide one, and worthy the attention of all.

EXTRACTS OF MEDICAL OPINIONS.

From W. VESSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D.—“I have no hesitation in stating that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an anti-spasmodic and sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results.”

From DR. M'MILLMAN, of New Galloway, Scotland: “I consider it the most valuable medicine known.”

G. HAYWARD, Esq., Surgeon, Stow-on-ye-Wold.—“I am now using DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE with marvellous good effects in allaying inveterate sickness in pregnancy.”

DR. M'GLIGOR CROFT, late Army Staff, says: “It is a most valuable medicine.”

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford: “It is without doubt the most valuable and certain anodyne we have.”

DR. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta: “Two doses completely cured me of Diarrhoea.”

From G. V. KIDOUT, Esq., Surgeon, Egham.—“As an astringent in severe Diarrhoea, and an anti-spasmodic in Cholice, with Cramps in the abdomen, the relief is instantaneous. As a sedative in Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux its effects were very remarkable. In Uterine Affections I have found it extremely valuable.”

CAUTION.--Beware of Spurious Compounds, or Imitations of “Chlorodyne.”

Dr. Browne placed the Recipe for making “Chlorodyne” in the hands of Mr. Davenport ONLY; consequently there can be no other Manufacturer. The genuine bears the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne” on the Government Stamp of each Bottle.

Sold only in Bottles, at 2s. 9d. & 4s. 6d., by the Sole Agent and Manufacturer,

J. T. DAVENPORT,
33, GREAT RUSSELL STREET, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE,
LONDON,

With Professional Testimonials enclosed.

MAPPIN BROTHERS,

67 AND 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON BRIDGE,
Established in Sheffield, A.D. 1810.
MAPPINS' TABLE CUTLERY.

	Ordinary Quality.			Medium Quality.			Best Quality.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Two Dozen Full-Size Table Knives, Ivory Handles	2	4	0	3	6	0	4	12	0
One-and-a-half-Dozen Full-Size Cheese ditto	1	4	0	1	14	6	2	11	0
One Pair Regular Meat Carvers	0	7	6	0	11	0	0	15	6
One Pair Extra Size ditto	0	8	6	0	12	0	0	16	6
One Pair Poultry Carvers	0	7	6	0	11	0	0	15	6
One Steel for Sharpening	0	3	0	0	4	0	0	6	0
Complete Service	£14	6		£18	6		£19	16	6

Messrs. Mappins' Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the first quality, with secure ivory handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the ivory handles.

MAPPIN BROTHERS' ELECTRO-SILVER SPOONS AND FORKS.

	"FIDDLE."		"THREADED."		"KINGS'."		"LILY."
	Strong	Plated extra	Strong	Plated extra	Strong	Plated extra	Plated extra
	Plating.	Strong.	Plating.	Strong.	Plating.	Strong.	Strong.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Table Spoons and Forks, per doz.	36 0	48 0	54 0	70 0	60 0	78 0	72 0
Desert Spoons and Forks	27 0	38 0	40 0	50 0	44 0	54 0	54 0
Tea Spoons	16 0	20 0	24 0	32 0	27 0	36 0	36 0

An Illustrated Priced Catalogue free on application.

MANUFACTORY, QUEEN'S CUTLERY WORKS, SHEFFIELD.
MAPPIN BROTHERS will open WEST END PREMISES, at 222 REGENT STREET, early in 1862.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

PARKINS & GOTTO, 24 & 25 OXFORD-STREET.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUMS from 4s. 6d.; a very handsome one, bound in real Morocco, two Gilt Clasps, for 30 Portraits, 10s. 6d.; Ditto, for 50 Portraits, 12s. 6d.—sent post-paid upon receipt of a Post-office Order.

DRESSING BAGS from 31s. 6d. filled; a choice of 300 DRESSING CASES from 21s.; a very handsome one for Four-and-a-half Guineas.

Reticules
Scrap Books
Albums
Inkstands
Carriage Bags
Glove Boxes
Scent Bottles
Fans
Knitting Boxes

Despatch Boxes
Postage Scales
Pencil Cases
Card Cases
Pocket Books
Portemonnaies
Jewel Cases
Card Baskets
Key Boxes

Writing Cases
Work Boxes
Book Slides
Envelope Cases
Blotting Books
Desks, of every kind
Tea Caddies
Chess Boards and Men
Stationery Cabinets

15,000 BIBLES, PRAYER BOOKS, AND CHURCH SERVICES
IN PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL BINDINGS.